Big Mobility Players, State and Local Agencies Join ITS America
Los Angeles DOT, SAE International Among New Members

Washington, DC – A number of leading names in mobility, innovation and infrastructure have joined the Intelligent Transportation Society of America (ITS America) since late last year.

Ciena; Commsignia; Connected Wise; Flow Labs; Horizon Signal Technologies; Jacksonville Transportation Authority; Kansas Department of Transportation; Kyyti; Los Angeles Department of Transportation; Mineta Transportation Institute (San Jose State University); North Dakota Department of Transportation; SAE International and Waycare are part of the growing number of private companies, public agencies, and research organizations working with ITS America to advance the research and deployment of intelligent transportation technologies. Scott Belcher, Rebecca Hunter and Blair Schlecter also joined as sole proprietors; Elizabeth Putnam is a new student member.

“In the current environment, it is more important than ever for organizations to collaborate and share best practices,” said ITS America President & CEO Shailen Bhatt. “We look forward to working with not only these new leaders from the public, private and research sectors but with all ITS America members as we continue to deploy technology to improve safety, reduce congestion and bring about a more sustainable and accessible transportation system.”
