FAQ

What will Capsule Arts use my submitted information for?

Once you send us your information, it will be reviewed by our team and we may get in touch with questions or to arrange a meeting. Successful artists can expect to hear from us within a month.

The information you share with us will be saved in our creative database and will be used solely to present you as an artist. Reproductions of artwork will not be made without full consent of the artist through a written agreement.

Can you give me an example of the type of bespoke projects you work on?

All our projects are different, from the interior design and function of the space, to the budget and the creative brief. Our past projects include hotels, hospitals, offices, restaurants and private residences. A selection can be seen on our website.

In terms of what type of art we usually supply, this is incredibly varied, spanning everything from traditional paintings and drawings, through to multimedia and video art.

How would Capsule Arts work with me for projects?

Whenever we are approached for a new project, our team reviews our database and researches creatives that we can work with to meet the needs of our client's brief. Sometimes we'll be looking to source existing work, and on other occasions we may be commissioning something new.

During this process, we'll show the client artwork portfolios to gather their feedback, and we'll often contact artists at this point to discuss the creative brief and hear their ideas for the project.

In the case of new art commissions, once we have confirmed which artist we are working with, there will be a formal appointment process during which costs and payment terms will be finalised. Our team will oversee the full commissioning process, from concept development to art installation, ensuring a smooth relationship between artists and clients.
