The History of Our Two Flags

Our ceiling was once named as the “Best Decorated Ceiling” by National Geographic Magazine. Besides serving as our decor, our two flags serve as a reminder of how two countries can work together to bring harmony.

In 1937, during the Second Sino-Japanese War (1937-1945), China was invaded by Japan. For nearly six years, China lost battle after battle to Japan due to continuous air strikes and bombing. In 1943, unable to bear further demolition of her country, the First Lady of the Republic of China, Madame Chiang Kai-Shek, flew to the United States and addressed the U.S. Congress. She made a desperate plea for help in saving her beloved country. Out of friendship and humanitarian reasons, President Franklin D. Roosevelt agreed to send out military aide in hopes of saving China.

In an effort to aid China and to put pressure on Japan, President Roosevelt authorized the creation of a clandestine “Special Air Unit” for service in China. This group was popularly known as the Flying Tigers. After the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, the war merged into the greater conflict of World War II. The war ended with the victory of the Allies in 1945.

To show his appreciation to the U.S. military, the founder of Hung Fong installed the two neon flags that you now see up above. He thought that the union of the two flags served as a great reminder of how his current home country of the United States had helped save China, the country of his birth. If you look closely at the American flag, there are only 48 Stars rather than the 50 that we know of today. The two flags were erected nearly 20 years prior to Alaska and Hawaii entering the Union in 1959.

Our ceiling truly has a story behind it. It whispers of how men fought for our country, our home, of how they believed in liberty and freedom. As you dine with us today, please do so in the peace of knowing that you just shared a piece of history with your family and friends.
