Wellness Retreat Canyon Ranch

We would like to give you an exclusive look at the latest spa and getaway from internationally acclaimed hospitality interior design firm Cole Martinez Curtis and Associates (CMCA).

Canyon Ranch Woodside, an immersive wellness retreat, embraces the surrounding serene Redwood environment. In collaboration with John Matthews Architects, the restoration and conversion includes 14 guest rooms and 24 standalone treehouses.

This is the 40-year-old luxury wellness hospitality group's third and latest expansion in addition to locations in Arizona and Massachusetts.

"With an extraordinary site to work with, it was imperative for us to bring natural materials such as wood and stone, and quiet tones of moss and slate gray, into the interiors to reflect the majestic surroundings," says Jill I. Cole, ISCH, Managing Principal of CMCA.

Each guest room is a welcoming sanctuary, ranging from 416 ft to 434 ft, accommodating two visitors comfortably. Large windows welcome in floods of natural light shining onto metal accents and wood features which tie the indoor and outdoor elements together seamlessly. Elevated on stilts, the private treehouses face outward toward the forest canopy for full foliage concentration.

The dining and common living spaces of the 14-acre grounds include the loft, a two-story room that invites guests to unwind by the fireplace or perch on the wraparound decks. The boutique spa with the treatment rooms features floral tile patterns and a captivating metal frame mosaic. Intimate nooks throughout the spa cocoon you in your very own warm experience. To fully embrace nature, the interiors of Canyon Ranch Woodside do not compete but complement the enchanting views. ■
