Dear Tribal Community,

We have had another busy and exciting month! The Grand Opening of the Mashpee Wampanoag Tribal Government/Community Center was a success with hundreds of Tribal members and dignitaries who attended. Our celebration was broadcast on both a local and national level with Tribal leadership, local elected officials as well as key representatives from the USDA who were instrumental in providing the funding source for our new building. We had a wonderful feast for lunch, enjoyed ceremony, showed off our new building and ended the day with a social. Thank you to everyone involved in the planning of the Government/Community Center and the planning of the Grand Opening. The hard work and dedication to this project resulted in an epic and historic day.

Also in April we celebrated the removal of the Town Brook dam and the return of thousands of alewives and river herring to traditional spawning and nursery areas. The removal of the dam is part of a comprehensive approach to restoring the historic sea-run fish run at Town Brook in Plymouth.

I want to also applaud and thank the many Tribal members who have made it a priority to perform Mashpee River clean up. With the number of storms that have occurred over recent years, the rivers have become laden with debris from fallen trees. It is remarkable that the herring have been able to swim given the amount of natural obstruction throughout the river. The passion our community exhibits is unparalleled and that’s what makes Mashpee

We look forward to continue the positive momentum and build Our Nation. With this positive passage of the annual budget by Tribal citizens, it also reinforces the confidence our community has in the progress and growth of our Tribe.

The Tribal Community affirmatively passed the 2014 Annual Budget by a vote of 81 yes and 41 no. On Sunday, March 30th 122 Enrolled-Registered Tribal Citizens cast their balll ot.

The growth of our Tribal Operations and Nation as a whole is remarkable and the services provided are extraordinarily unparalleled!

Special thanks to the Tribal Finance Team led by Treasurer Robert Hendricks, Sr., Department Director Marjorie Seagraves and her staff for their tireless and unwavering effort to work with all departments and Tribal Council in presenting the 2014 Annual Budget.

2. Community & Government Center Grand Opening Celebration

On March 29th, Tribal community gathered to celebrate the historic opening of our new 46,000-square-foot, three-level, $15 million government and community center. More than 1,500 guests celebrated with a ribbon-cutting ceremony, and traditional ceremony, cuisine, and entertainment.

Construction of the building began in October 2012 and was funded by a $12.7 million loan from a US Department of Agriculture rural development program. Several tribal departments started occupying the building in late February.

Tours of the new building began in its two-story, sun-filled, dome shaped lobby, which was designed to incorporate cultural elements. The custom-made terrazzo floor contains over 700 pounds of Mashpee wampum that were hand crushed by tribal members. In the middle of the floor is the Tribe’s logo. The lobby is surrounded with water features that are intended to honor the Mashpee River herring run, Mill Pond, and Mashpee-Wakeby Pond.

The lobby will soon include mural panels donated by Plimoth Plantation, as well as cedar poles that will be placed in the lobby to give it more of a “lodge” feel. The roof of the lobby resembles a turtle shell, an important component in the Wampanoag creation story. “We want people to feel a bit of Mashpee history and our land when they walk in,” Councilwoman Trish Keliinui said.

The second floor of the building is devoted to office workspace including: conference rooms with teleconferencing capabilities and online scheduling systems, state-of-the-art executive offices, and

Mwalim is Nominee in the NEUMA

The 8th Annual New England Urban Music Awards (NEUMA) is upon us, releasing the list of official nominees. Mwalim DaPhunkee Professor is a nominee for the “Best Male Jazz Artist” category, for his latest album “Awakened By A Noon Day Sun” (LMMGM/ Spirit Wind Records). Cast your vote for Mwalim and other nominees by visiting www.mwalim.com and clicking the link “Vote for Mwalim in the 2014 NEUMA”.

The New England Urban Music Awards was created in 2006 to acknowledge and promote the achievements of local and regional urban artists, producers, Disc Jockeys, and promoters who have contributed to the R&B, Hip Hop, Jazz, Caribbean, Spoken Word and Gospel music scene in New England. Members of the general make preliminary nominations public and a pool of music industry professionals select qualifying nominees. The winners are selected by a vote of the general public. For more info, visit ne.urbanmusicawards.org.

Not a stranger to the NEUMA, Mwalim swept the 2010 Jazz category with his album “The Liberation Sessions” winning the “Best Jazz Male” as well as “Best Jazz Female” for Amaris Moss vocal work on the same album. He won the category again in 2012 for his House Music influenced “DEEP Soul Chants & Hollers” album.

“Awakened By A Noon Day Sun” also called the ‘NDN Jazz’ album for it’s use of eastern Native American influenced melodies blended with a healthy dose of jazz-funk (or funk-jazz). The premiere single from the album, “The Trading Post” is finding it’s way into rotation on jazz, community, and Native American radio stations throughout the USA and Canada as well as internet based stations. The album can be purchased as a download on iTunes, eMusic, Amazon and Spotify.

Cameron Frye Comments on Team Names

In response to Matthew Gillen’s February 25, 2014 opinion article entitled “Redskins may become red faced over controversy,” I would like to take the opportunity to offer my opinion and sentiments. As the level of controversy regarding the name of the Washington Redskins continues to escalate, I think it is absolutely imperative to present both sides of the argument. With that being said, I will take a position that I hope will assist one to better understand the importance of changing the team name, and, more importantly, a position that will prompt one to look at this issue from a different perspective.

Clearly, the paramount issue remains the term “Redskin,” a term coined by Europeans that was used to identify Native Americans by their skin complexion. As mentioned in the article, it is thought by some to be a racial slur that is derogatory and offensive toward Native Americans; however, others feel differently, resulting in a massive disparity as to the appropriateness of the term “Redskin.” From a Native American standpoint, it is similar to other racial slurs like “nigger” “spick” or “chink” terms often referencing a member of the African-American, Hispanic-American, and Asian-all the more special!

We have also begun planning for the 93rd annual Powwow, to be held on July 4th, 5th and 6th at the Cape Cod Fairgrounds, formally the Barnstable County Fairgrounds, in East Falmouth. The theme this year is “Honoring Our Waterways.” I would like to congratulate our Head staff of Earl “Chiefy” Mills, Jr., as emcee. If you would like to be involved in the planning process please contact Powwow Committee Chairman Brian Weeden who can be reached here at the MWT Community/Government Center or Councilman Charles Foster who serves as liaison to the committee.

On June 14th our Tribal Education Department, led by Director Renee Pocknett, will host a celebration brunch for all class of 2014 graduates. This includes graduates from all levels and programs so please save the date.

Coinciding with the Graduate celebration on June 14th will be the annual Youth Sobriety Powwow scheduled to be held at the powwow grounds.

Lastly, I would like to send a special prayer and message to our Narragansett family who are mourning the passing of Dr. Ella Brown. Tribal leadership from all of our sister Tribes were present and took part in the moving ceremony for the matriarch of the Brown family. We continue to hold them in our prayers to the Creator.

I encourage you to read the many exciting articles and updates throughout this issue of Nahuauk Mittark Newsletter as well as to respond to Councilwoman Trish Keliinui with your email addresses in order to receive any immediate email updates and message from me. With all of the exciting and informative events that occur within our Tribe, we are continually striving to provide the best and most efficient communication flow to our Tribal members.

We are in for a very exciting year and I anticipate communication will be steady and positive, as we continue to move forward together!!

classrooms with Smart Boards that accommodate its 73 working employees.

“This is the most high-tech building on the Cape, and perhaps in the state of Massachusetts,” Chairman Cedric Cromwell said.

The building also includes a 400-seat gymnasium with an electronic scoreboard and can also be used to accommodate receptions, dances, and other events. The gymnasium also features a large, ceiling-mounted retractable screen that can be used to show films.

The new building also includes a council chamber, climate controlled tribal archives, elders’ lounge, commercial-sized kitchen, youth craft room, exercise room with men’s and women’s locker room, a tribal courtroom and peacemaker’s room, and a food pantry for the tribal community.

While the new tribal and government center has only been opened for a month, there is already talk of expansion.

“We are already reaching capacity in the new building and have started to consider a possible 14,000-square-foot expansion,” Vice-Chairwoman Jessie Baird said.
The Archives Room is now open. Please take time to think about what news articles, pictures, books, recordings, flyers, tribal event programs you would like to contribute. These items can be digitized and returned to you or become part of our permanent records. We would love to show you the Archival Room and its high security features climate control and archival protective containers and sleeves for our precious collection. We would like to provide tribal members with exciting and accurate information about our relatives who have past on, dating back as many generations as we can go. Our records will be organized so that you can find the names of your relatives and also learn about their past times, achievements, see photos, maybe voice recordings, video, perhaps something they’ve written, as we seek to memorialize their personality.

The Mashpee Indian Whaling exhibit will remain on display. There were approximately 430 Mashpee men who sailed on whaling ships all over the world for about 75 years. We have photographs of these men, dozens of short stories about their adventures, occupations, ports visited, ranks held, information about ships they sailed and the tools they used and invented. We have genealogy on two of these men, Matthias Amos and Solomon Attaquin. These prominent Mashpee men later became our first selectmen. Come and visit the Whaling Exhibit to learn how you are related to them!

American community, respectively. The above slurs, among others, are considered demeaning, insulting, inappropriate, and disrespectful. To help put this into context, would the NFL ever allow a team to attach or associate “nigger” “spick” or “chink” with their organization? No. So, in the spirit of fairness, why should the NFL continue to allow Washington to use the term Redskin, as it is demeaning, insulting, inappropriate and disrespectful toward Native Americans.

Roger Goodell, the commissioner of the NFL, recently declared in a public statement that the Redskins, “have presented the name in a way that has honored Native Americans.” As one reflects on that assertion, one may find him or her questioning its validity given that the term “Redskin” was coined and used primarily by the victor to describe Native Americans; in other words, it was a racial term used by the dominant culture. So, what part of that is honorable? Additionally, the logo of the Redskins does a poor job of providing an accurate depiction of all Native Americans. Not all Native Americans look like that and share the same skin complexion or even have long hair with feathers hanging down. That is simply how the dominant culture depicted all Native Americans, which of course is not an accurate portrayal, but as we know the victor writes history. So, again, I ask what part of that is honorable?

The use of the term Redskins is not only disrespectful, but it is also disrespectful. In the article, the author mentions, “the team has never shown any disrespect to the people it represents and everyone associated with it are proud to be called Redskins.” Well, if that were the case, there would be little dispute and more importantly there would be no controversy surrounding the name and logo; however, that is not the case. The simple fact that the logo inaccurately depicts Native American culture, and that the term Redskin has a negative connotation attached is in itself disrespectful. It is easy for non-Native Americans to say it is not respectful or even honorable, but if I put it into a different context that directly relates to him or her personally, I am sure it would not be so easy to make that same assertion. It is all about perspective, and unfortunately many who are in support of keeping the name Redskins have neglected to look at this from a different perspective, mainly that of a Native American. So, in an effort to urge one to look at this issue from a different perspective, I will put this into context. Instead of being called the Washington Redskins imagine if they were called the Washington Whiteskins and their symbol depicted a white Irish man who appeared to be drunk. Is that respectful or honorable? No. And although some may argue it is while others may argue it is not, one thing we can all agree upon is that it is not an accurate depiction of the Caucasian community. Obviously not all Caucasian people are Irish, and not all Irish people drink heavily; however, the commonality is that they are common misconceptions and stereotypes. Unfortunately, people do not understand the true impact or implications of such things until it applies directly to them. If Native Americans were the dominant culture, as they were prior to the arrival of the Europeans, and a NFL team was named the Whiteskins, I suspect there would be just as much controversy surrounding the name. Wouldn’t you? So, I suggest before one goes ahead and claims it is not a big deal or declares that it is an invalid argument supported by no evidence that one take a moment and truthfully consider how one would feel if put into the same position.

All things considered, it is time. It is time for the Washington Redskins franchise to seriously consider changing their name. Washington ought to act swiftly though, as the opposition is garnering increasingly more support from not just the Native American community, but the non-Native American community as well. Opponents like Senator Maria Cantwell and Representative Tom Cole are not willing to compromise with anything less than a name change. And as the controversy continues to heighten, it would probably be a good idea for Washington to carefully consider the impact their name has on the Native American culture. In order to do so, however, that may require decision makers to look at this from a different perspective. No matter what perspective you look at it though the term “Redskin” is no way, shape or form respectful or even honorable. In the spirit of fairness, it is only right that Washington reevaluates their decision on this controversial matter and takes into account the level of impact the term “Redskin” has on many Native Americans.
