Puerto Rico has recently declared a state of emergency after being struck by a series of earthquakes. Currently, many victims of the earthquakes in Puerto Rico’s southern coast are still sleeping outside in camps and shelters. There’s been significant damage to the region’s infrastructure that is preventing families from returning to their homes, and businesses from serving their communities. Thanks to our generous donors and corporate partners, Foundation for Puerto Rico’s Earthquake Relief Fund has raised over $146,000 to date, ensuring resources get in the hands of the people who need them the most.
