POLICE REFORM AND REINVENTION COLLABORATIVE

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATIONS

DRAFT 3-12-21

Modified 3-20-21

SECTION 1 - BACKGROUND AND ANALYSIS

REFORM COMMITTEE COMPOSITION AND PROCESS (RESOLUTION ATTACHED AS APPENDIX A)

In response to New York State Executive Order 203, the Town of Shelter Island formed the Police Reform and Reinvention Committee to recommend potential improvements to the Shelter Island Police Department. The Committee met at least weekly over the course of three months. The Committee comprises five members either living or working in Shelter Island Town.

Committee members participated actively in the process, engaging in a healthy and productive exchange of information and ideas with each other and with Police Chief James Read, Town Supervisor Gerard Siller and Deputy Supervisor Amber Brach-Williams. Through this open, two-way process, the Committee learned much about how the police department currently operates, its members familiarizing themselves with such things as police rules and procedures, processes for filing complaints, the variety of trainings police periodically undergo (capacity and funding permitting), the demographic composition of the police force, and the efforts already underway to strengthen police-community relations and create more transparency and accountability. Chief Read provided all documents requested by the Committee promptly and was an active, constructive participant in the reform process, including by being receptive to Committee members' points of view and recommendations.

COMMUNITY SURVEY (RESULTS ATTACHED AS APPENDIX B)

The Town distributed an anonymous online survey in Spanish and English to the community, receiving 592 responses (10 of which were in Spanish). The survey covered the following areas: Police roles and services, personal experience and perception of the police (including language access and profiling questions), use of force, transparency and accountability, the complaint process and future of the police force.

The survey was shared with the public through various channels, including on the Shelter Island Town website, Town social media, and advertising in the local media. Hard copies of the survey were available at the Town Hall and the Shelter Island Public Library.

While the survey indicated some areas that the Police Department needs to address and improve, the responses were generally positive.

STAKEHOLDER MEETINGS

The committee arranged meetings with local groups it believed would have an interest in police reform, including the Police Benevolent Association (PBA), the Shelter Island Chamber of Commerce and local business leaders, nonprofit (advocacy and non-advocacy) organizations, and the education, faith, and mental health sectors. The vast majority of the feedback received was positive. There were questions regarding whether the police received anti-bias training and a general interest in body-worn cameras and diversification of the department.

PUBLIC FORUM (APPENDIX C)

The Shelter Island Police Reform and Reinvention Committee, Town Board and the Police Chief held a virtual listening session and public forum on March 3, 2021 to learn about community members' experiences and perceptions of Shelter Island Police Department. The vast majority of the comments regarding the Police Department were extremely positive. The public mostly had questions rather than criticism, leading to the conclusion that communications should be improved. Additionally, community members expressed interest in diversification of the police force and the introduction of body-worn cameras.

PUBLIC COMMENTS (APPENDIX D)

Based upon publicity and an invitation on the survey, a total of 20 comments were received by the committee from community members over the course of the reform process. Of those comments, 12 were positive. Of those with concerns, the primary issues were the size of the police budget and officers' salaries, a desire for an alternate avenue to bring complaints against a police officer, interest in more positive police involvement with school activities, interest in a Spanish speaking and/or female officer, and a concern that the police target certain individuals (this seems to be based on personal relationships rather than race or ethnicity). There were also a number of comments regarding operational issues and town code enforcement that fell outside of the review parameters.

COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS (APPENDIX E)

The recommendations that follow emerged from Committee meetings, Plan Drafting Subcommittee meetings, community and youth survey results, and public comments. The Committee reviewed them in draft form and then in semi-final form before they were presented to the Town Board and to the public for comment. The Committee addressed all of the issues required by the Executive Order, placing an emphasis on improving police-community relations, which the Committee understands to be the overarching goal that encompasses issues related to outreach, trust building, transparency, accountability, bias-free policing, and community needs.

POLICE DEPARTMENT SELF EVALUATION - ACCREDITATION

The Shelter Island Police Department has been accredited by the New York State Division of Criminal Justice Services since 2009, is reviewed annually and has continued to meet or exceed the standards.

Accreditation is a progressive and contemporary way of helping police agencies evaluate and improve their overall performance. It provides formal recognition that an organization meets or exceeds general expectations of quality in the field. Accreditation acknowledges the implementation of policies that are conceptually sound and operationally effective.

The New York State program became operational in 1989 and encompasses four principal goals:

1. To increase the effectiveness and efficiency of law enforcement agencies utilizing existing personnel, equipment, and facilities to the extent possible;
2. To promote increased cooperation and coordination among law enforcement agencies and other agencies of the criminal justice services;
3. To ensure the appropriate training of law enforcement personnel; and
4. To promote public confidence in law enforcement agencies.

The Accreditation Program is comprised of a set of standards developed to further enhance the capabilities of an agency and is divided into three categories. Standards in the Administrative section have provisions for such topics as agency organization, fiscal management, personnel practices, and records management. Training standards encompass basic and in-service instruction, as well as training for supervisors and specialized or technical assignments. Operations standards deal with such critical and litigious topics as high-speed pursuits, roadblocks, patrol, and unusual occurrences.

Law enforcement accreditation is a method and an ongoing process to ensure that the Police Department is in compliance with national “best practices” in policing covering all aspects of law enforcement policies, procedures, and operations. Accreditation makes a statement to other law enforcement agencies, professions, and the community that the Police Department meets the highest standards of professionalism.

LEXIPOL, LLC

Prior to the start of the police reform process, the Shelter Island Police Department started the process of reviewing all of its policies. This process is continuing and is anticipated to be completed by the end of the year. Policy review includes Federal and New York State Law compliance, New York State accreditation and best practices.

Lexipol, a contracted third-party advisory company, provides policy manuals, training bulletins, and consulting services for police and public safety departments, with the intent to decrease liability risk. Lexipol attempts to bring forth best practices from around the country. This ensures that departments like ours are provided an outside perspective with an eye to “checks and balances.”

Lexipol sets forth standards for police departments in the following areas:

- Transparency
- Training
- Policy review and management
- Third party review
- Understanding best practices (nationally)

COMPLIANCE WITH STATE STATUTES

In 2020 the State of New York instituted a number of statutory changes that affect policing and police officers. The Shelter Island Police Department has been evaluating these changes and incorporating them into training and departmental policies.

SECTION 3 – CONCLUSION

Being a small department presents both challenges and opportunities. Particularly, as the officers are also members of the community and are active in community events and organizations there is a level of casual interaction with the community that not many police organizations can achieve. With that familiarity, however, comes tendency to envision a lack of impartiality, whether real or imagined, which is a difficulty that the department will likely face in perpetuity and is a perception that it must do its best to overcome.

The other major challenge facing the Police Department is the changing demographics of Shelter Island. There is at the same time an increase in the Hispanic population and an influx of wealthy urban residents. This presents a social conflict on a level that Shelter Island has not previously had to address, having until recent decades been predominantly a middle-class farming and fishing community. A number of the recommendations in this report are intended to address these issues.

By and large, the Shelter Island Police Department is ahead of the curve on police reform. Most of the new requirements and even the committee recommendations were already underway in some form. Nevertheless, policies, standards and training will remain under constant review and the Department will continue annual reaccreditation.
