

The Transatlantic Studies Association
18th Annual Conference
8 – 10 July 2019

TSA

Lancaster
University

WELCOME TO TSA 2019

Following its first trip across the Atlantic for last year's conference at the University of North Georgia, the TSA returns to the UK this year for its eighteenth annual conference at the University of Lancaster.

Lancaster's transatlantic connections date back to the eighteenth century when the city was a significant port for trade with the West Indies. Today, Lancaster is a thriving market town with a wide selection of pubs, restaurants and shops.

This year's conference includes a record number of papers with close to 200 presentations taking place over the course of two and a half days. These include papers from a range of disciplines, including history, politics and international relations, and literary and cultural studies.

Continuing the strong social element of TSA, a drinks reception will take place on the opening evening of the conference, featuring live entertainment by local jazz group, the Luca Brasi Four, featuring Gaia. The conference will close with a formal dinner at the renowned 1930s art-deco Midland Hotel in Morecambe.

The annual conference will see the award of established prizes, including the TSA-Cambridge University book prize and the DC Watt prize for the best paper presented at the conference by an early career scholar. We are also delighted to announce the winner of the new TSA-Palgrave-Macmillan research award. As with previous conferences, the TSA has happily offered a number of travel grants to early career scholars to aid their attendance at the conference.

The TSA AGM will take place during the conference, as well as the annual meeting of the TSA management committee. Please come along to the AGM to hear about recent developments in TSA and plans for further ventures.

TSA 2020 will take us to Portugal, where the Centro de Estudos Internacionais, part of the University Institute of Lisbon, will host the conference between 6-8 July 2020.

Wishing you a very enjoyable conference,

Thomas Mills, TSA Vice Chair and Local Organiser.
