On June 24, 2022, the United States Supreme Court issued its ruling in Dobbs v. Jackson Women’s Health Organization, overturning Roe v. Wade and abandoning nearly 50 years of precedent supporting a Constitutional right to abortion. The impact of this decision was immediate and devastating. In the first 100 days following the Dobbs decision, 66 clinics across 15 states were forced to stop offering abortions (14 of those states implemented total or 6-week bans). In the year ahead, a total of 26 states are expected to ban abortion.

It has never been more clear that state legislatures are among the most important battlegrounds in fighting for civil and human rights. We cannot rely on the current Supreme Court to defend these rights and we cannot afford to ignore the immense power state legislatures wield - which is why I was so proud to launch our State Legislative Advocacy Academy (SLAA) in August 2022. Through the SLAA, we are training hundreds of lawyers and law students across the country to put their skills to work in support of state-level policy fights.

At the same time, we launched the Reproductive Health Legal Assistance Project (RHLAP) to ensure that every patient who is legally entitled to care receives it; our Climate Change program is working to get billions of dollars in infrastructure funding in the hands of disadvantaged communities; and our Project Corazon team continues to provide legal services to vulnerable asylum seekers during one of the worst humanitarian crises we’ve seen in the Rio Grande Valley. We couldn’t do this work without your support, so I thank you for being part of the L4GG community. I hope you find this newsletter to be a source of inspiration, as it is for me.

HELPING VULNERABLE COMMUNITIES ACCESS INFRASTRUCTURE FUNDING

The federal government has authorized an historic $2 trillion investment in green energy and infrastructure through recent climate and infrastructure bills, however, states lack the information necessary to prioritize funding to communities most vulnerable to the impacts of climate change.

This is why we created our “Disadvantaged Communities Report,” an interactive document that allows stakeholders from each state to find equity policy guidelines and definitions available about communities in their state that are marginalized, underserved, and overburdened by pollution. We’ve also launched our Funding Clinic Webinar Series to provide state and local governments and underserved communities with guidance on how to obtain federal funding to address environmental justice and climate change.

Policymakers need this information to upgrade infrastructure and build climate resilience projects for vulnerable communities that have historically been ignored. Frontline communities need this information to overcome the barriers to entry they historically face when applying for federal funds. Our work will ensure this historic investment combats climate inequities instead of exacerbating them.

PROJECT CORAZON FACES HUMANITARIAN CRISIS IN REYNOSA, MEXICO

There’s a growing humanitarian crisis at the southern border that is going unnoticed by many Americans. Local aid groups in Reynosa, MX estimate that roughly 6,000 migrants are living in camping tents on the streets without access to running water and protection from dangerous cartel activity. That’s more than twice the number of asylum seekers who were in the Matamoros refugee camps in 2019.

Most of the individuals in Reynosa are barred from seeking asylum in the U.S. due to Title 42, a policy designed to slow the spread of COVID-19 that effectively closes the southern border. The Project Corazon team is doing everything we can to secure life-saving parole from Title 42 and MPP for hundreds of extremely vulnerable asylum seekers (i.e. LGBTQ+ individuals, those with medical conditions, third-language speakers, pregnant individuals etc.). For many, humanitarian parole is their only option at securing safety in the U.S., and it’s virtually impossible to obtain parole without legal assistance.
