- Ramadan Fastathon
  - About: The campus MSA is inviting the entire Princeton campus to experience the beauty of Ramadan and try fasting, or any type of fasting that people are prepared to do, for one day. We would heavily suggest that there is no pressure to observe the complete day of fast. We instead encourage students to do what is within their comfort level. The MSA will host a public pre-fast meal, known as Sahoor, as well as a break-fast dinner, known as Iftar, sharing the awesome and memorable experience of waking up before the sunrise and enjoying an unconventionally timed meal with friends and going a whole day without worrying about food or drink. This is a chance for students, staff, and administrators to familiarize themselves with Muslims and our culture by sharing the experience at least once with us, and is sure to be something to brag about for years to come. We hope to foster community building campus wide through encouraging all of campus to come join the vibrant campus muslim community in observing a day of fasting. We hope that students walk away more culturally enriched and informed about their fellow muslim students.
