Heshima stands for respect, honor, and dignity

OUR VISION
The children and youth Heshima Kenya serves today become tomorrow’s advocates, creating social change, both individually and collectively.

OUR MISSION
Heshima Kenya specializes in identifying and protecting orphaned, unaccompanied and separated refugee children and youth, especially girls, young women and their children living in Nairobi, Kenya.

OUR APPROACH
Heshima Kenya’s integrated model provides holistic support, empowering refugee girls and young women to become catalysts for positive change in their communities, and leaders in their own right.

Dear Friends,

The refugee girls and young women we serve call Heshima Kenya family. Since our founding in 2008, we have been at the forefront of protecting the most vulnerable refugee girls and young women: making them visible and providing them with the tools, community and confidence to thrive. In 2013, we served over 450 girls, young women and their children. Our revenue from individual and foundation support grew over 25 percent. Sales from the Maisha Collective increased by 18 percent as we ventured into new partnerships and collaborations.

Over the years – notably the last two – the Heshima Kenya family has flourished while operating in a climate of political uncertainty. Our girls have experienced many challenges because of the government encampment directive issued in March. We’ve witnessed the courage and resilience of our girls in the face of extortion, fear and xenophobia. We’re so proud to say that our team has not only weathered these challenges but that we continue to grow significantly, and are full of hope for the future.

In less than a decade, the number of refugee children and adolescent girls Heshima Kenya cares for has tripled and we are anticipating a watershed 2015. Heshima’s community outreach program now extends to more than half a dozen urban communities throughout Nairobi. Every day, the scope and scale of Heshima’s work is making a real and lasting difference in the lives of hundreds of refugee girls and women. As our numbers and services continue to increase, so too have our donors and supporters—those of you who make Heshima Kenya’s work possible.

As we look forward to a new year, we are ever grateful for your continued commitment. Thank you for your incredible support.

From our Heshima family to yours, we wish you a fabulous 2015.

Sincerely,

Ann Laatsch   Rosalind Raddatz

We partnered with UN Women to provide financial literacy and micro-loans to refugee women and Maisha graduates.

In our new formal partnership with UNHCR we will serve as the agency’s partner for child protection in Nairobi, enhancing our ability to identify vulnerable children and advocate and protect their rights.
Dear Heshima Supporters,

Since joining Heshima Kenya in 2012, and now stepping into my new role as Executive Director, it is a tremendous honor to lead Heshima Kenya in providing the highest quality of care for the most vulnerable of the world’s refugees. Over 100,000 refugees live in Nairobi alone, and among the most defenseless are refugee girls and young women. Lacking protection, they are at extreme risk of sexual and gender based violence and face higher rates of illiteracy, early pregnancy, forced marriage, FGM, and depression. Heshima Kenya is the only organization dedicated to serving this population in Kenya.

In 2013, the Westgate terrorist attack, ongoing insecurity in Somalia, and stricter refugee policies heightened political unrest and xenophobia in Nairobi. The resulting climate intensified the challenges vulnerable girls face. Already prone to slipping through the cracks of traditional aid agencies, they were even more susceptible to police brutality, extortion, and increased violence.

Simply put, this is why Heshima Kenya exists: we provide a lifeline for refugee women and girls. As we expand, our programs continue to be at the forefront on response and protection, even during the most precarious times. In 2014, while hundreds of refugees were being rounded up and sent to refugee camps, we kept those in our care safe. When law enforcement was demanding ID’s at random checkpoints, we created the Heshima Kenya Educational Center identification card for all of our girls to ensure their safety. Contingency plans across all programs were established and implemented.

In this report, you'll meet three girls we serve: Asha, Fatuma and Elizabeth. Each girl’s story follows her unique journey within our programs. They are eager students. They are teen mothers with hopes for their babies. They are friends, sisters, and young women who imagine a brighter future. With the case management and long-term support Heshima Kenya provides, you’ll see how they are on their way to healing, happiness, and independence.

Looking ahead, 2015 promises to be a landmark year in terms of our growth. In January of 2015 we will be entering into formal implementing partnership with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). The Maisha Collective is on the verge of tremendous growth and our number of beneficiaries will be growing significantly. We couldn’t have done it without you.

Recent challenges have helped Heshima Kenya to become stronger and more resolute in our mission, which is beautifully conveyed by the girls and young women who form our community. They are our greatest testimony of success. Thank you for your ongoing support, and for believing in their future.

Sincerely,

Alisa Roadcup

Executive Director
I can afford to smile now, thanks to Heshima Kenya.

Asha is 15 years old. She fled an abusive situation in Ethiopia in January 2013 and arrived in Nairobi alone on a truck. She did not know what to do or where to go. She was taken in by a man who abused her and kept her captive in his home. When she became pregnant, he forced her out onto the street. She gave birth to her son eight months ago.

Asha was afraid and unsure of how she would care for her new baby. Fortunately, she was identified by one of Heshima Kenya’s Junior Ambassadors in the community and was immediately accepted into our Safe House to meet her first and most pressing need: a safe and secure place to live.

Asha is feeling hopeful and anticipating what the future holds. She has food, clothing, and is learning how to care for her baby. Her basic needs are being met as she begins to heal. Next, Heshima Kenya will help her register for legal status with UNHCR and enroll her in our education program. She is happy to finally feel peace.

Fatuma fled Somalia after her father was killed. She arrived from Somalia with a group of neighbors in 2012. She found Heshima Kenya in 2013 through our community outreach workshops, which we conduct in Nairobi’s refugee communities. Fatuma told our staff about her struggles—she was not enrolled in school, she had no way to earn money, and was living with a host family who could not provide her with clothing or a bed.

She was immediately enrolled in our Girls’ Empowerment Project, where she finally began to learn. Our case management team provided her host family with food baskets, clothing, and a mattress. Fatuma worked hard and excelled in school. Now, only one year later, she is enrolled in Heshima’s tailoring program and looking forward to joining the Maisha Collective where she can earn a stipend and save her money so she can afford an apartment.
On the Ground: The Plight of Kenya’s Refugees

Today, Kenya’s refugee crisis is facing a new set of challenges, primarily due to the outbreak of war in Southern Sudan and the country’s ongoing conflict with Somalia to secure its borders. These new developments affect both urban refugees and the organizations, like Heshima Kenya, that serve them. Despite these challenges, we continue to be a leading protection organization, critical partner, and voice for the most vulnerable. We track trends and data to strengthen not only our own programs, but also inform the larger international community about the children and youth we serve.

As of July 2014, Kenya had 575,334 registered refugees and it is projected that by 2015 this number will increase to 662,850. Of these, nearly 25 percent are children who fled without their parents to Kenya. In December 2012 and again in March 2014, the Government of Kenya issued a directive stating that all refugees in urban areas were to relocate to Kakuma or Dadaab refugee camps.

Kenya’s refugee camps are overcrowded; basic humanitarian assistance and services are grossly overstretched. It is estimated that one in three girls in the camps are likely to suffer sexual violence before the age of 18. The camps are not suitable places for vulnerable children to live.

The government also launched a security operation, known as Usalama Watch, this past spring. This mandated the forcible relocation of refugees. Many were arrested and forced to move to camps or repatriate to their countries of origin. Hundreds of parents were relocated without their children; over 300 unaccompanied children were left abandoned in the Nairobi area. Heshima Kenya coordinated with partners to conduct assessments and provide assistance to these children.

To raise awareness of the plight of unaccompanied refugee women and children, Heshima Kenya conducted sensitization workshops with government officials and partners on the special needs of refugee children, particularly young girls who have survived gender based violence. We also published our first formal field report, The Moved and the Shaken: How Forced Relocation Affects the Lives of Urban Refugee Women and Girls that focuses on the unique vulnerability and needs of refugee women.

Heshima Kenya is a leading stakeholder advocating for the rights of Kenya’s refugees, especially children. We continue to work on the ground to identify the most vulnerable, as well as develop critical partnerships and awareness campaigns to ensure that other organizations and the Government of Kenya supports and protects this population.
“Because of Heshima, I am hopeful for myself and my daughter.”

Elizabeth arrived in Nairobi in 2010 after fleeing the Congo to escape war. All alone and without family, she was raped and became pregnant. She and her daughter were enrolled in Heshima Kenya in 2011, where they both thrived. Elizabeth joined the Girls’ Empowerment Project, then the tailoring program, and graduated to the Maisha Collective. Upon graduating, she received a small grant to start her own business selling fabric in the market. She is able to pay rent and care for her daughter in her own apartment in Nairobi.

This past summer, Elizabeth was arrested by the police as part of the government’s roundup of refugees. With the confidence and language skills she developed while at Heshima Kenya, she was able to communicate with the officers to secure her release.

Now 20, Elizabeth has enrolled in a business and finance course at a local college. She is grateful for her life, her daughter, and her ability to work in the community. To Elizabeth, success means “being independent and giving my child the best medical care, food, and attention. I’ve learned how important these things are.”

A Conversation with Nairobi’s Leadership

What differentiates Heshima Kenya’s model from other NGOs?

Caroline Most other NGOs respond to a specific problem, they don’t talk about an integrated approach. Working with an organization where one girl can receive all the services she needs, and to find safe spaces and friendship among her peers, is inspiring.

Can you speak to how Heshima has responded in times of crisis?

Alice Since I started working with Heshima Kenya, the environment had always been somewhat stable. However, when the Government of Kenya issued the directive, life became very shaky for urban refugees in Nairobi, especially those who had been living here for a long time.

In response to the directive, we developed a contingency plan. We anticipated that our Safe House would become a rescue center for those too afraid to live in their homes—we bought mattresses, supplies and extra food to accommodate more girls. Then Westgate happened. The insecurity affected the operations of all organizations serving refugees. The government decided that because Westgate was attacked by Al-Shabaab, the Somali terrorist group, that all Somalis should be targeted, relocated, or arrested. Heshima girls were terrified. Two of our girls were arrested on their way to our school. We rushed to the station and were able to convince the police to release them.

Except for those living in our Safe House Program, the insecurity reached a point where we all felt threatened. Even some of our Somali staff were targeted. Our goal throughout was to sustain our programs so our residents could maintain their sense of routine. This was fundamental to us.

Caroline We made sure we maintained our good relations with the government and found creative ways to protect the girls as they traveled to and from our programs. We implemented school ID cards, which the government accepted. We also received a letter of support from the head of the Children’s Department stating that the ministry supported our programs.

How are Heshima's programs transformational?

Caroline I have a special case that often serves as my inspiration as a manager, especially during tough times. There is this girl who came to us when she was pregnant and 16 years old. She was raped when she was fleeing her country and was infected with HIV. When she came to Kenya, she was looking for her big sister, but she couldn’t be traced. She lost her parents during the war. When she came to the Safe House, she cried and cried—she didn’t want to stay. After significant counseling, she agreed to stay.

She was around five months pregnant when she arrived and we took her to the hospital for every visit. She gave birth to a beautiful baby girl, named Blessed. She didn’t want to bond with her baby, but finally accepted her after six months. When she learned her baby was HIV-negative, she was crying.

I had seen her withdrawn at times, even suicidal. When she learned Blessed’s status, she became strong and exuded energy. When you see her smiling and dancing, you can’t believe it was the same girl. We were able to trace her sister with help from UNHCR. As she waits for resettlement, which can take years, she is going to school—she dances at all the events... she always finds a reason to smile! This is why I do what I do.
