Rhode Island workers filed 12 representation cases with the National Labor Relations Board in FY22, a decrease of 20% compared to the previous fiscal year.

Rhode Island workers filed 126 unfair labor practice charges against employers, an increase of 0% compared to the previous fiscal year.

Among all states and territories, workers in Rhode Island ranked 52nd in representation cases and 51st in unfair labor practice charges at the NLRB.

Unfair labor practices (ULP) include, but are not limited to, firing employees for organizing a union, retaliating against workers for supporting a union, or refusing to bargain with an established union.

Representation cases are petitions for the NLRB to conduct an election in which employees vote on whether to unionize and bargain collectively with their employer. Employees, employers, and unions may file these petitions.
