European Journalist of the Year:

LAURENT RICHARD

Executive director and founder of Forbidden Stories, France

We have heard a lot of different voices this week – and this evening.
Some we have not yet heard. Those of the dead.
Those of the colleagues assassinated in their pursuit of the truth.
Journalists silenced forever.

Were it not for one man.
One man working peaceably next door to the newsroom of Charlie Hebdo when his life suddenly took a sharp turn:
when on 7 January 2015 two members of Al Quaida came into the building and started killing.
He arrived minutes later and spent the next hours in the room, trying to help the people who survived and identifying the dead.
The stories of violence this man had been pursuing as an investigative journalist out in Israel, Azerbaijan, Brazil or the Middle East had now come to him.
He was sad, and he was angry - and he was changed.

He dropped everything (he was doing) and decided to fight for those voices of the dead:
to keep them going, to collect them, to safeguard their stories, to keep them alive and to make sure they will be heard. To send a message to the enemies of the free press:
"You have killed the messenger, but you will not kill the message".

He left his job, created a team, raised funds, learned how to encrypt, how to programme, how to run a non-profit organisation.... With one goal in mind: creating a platform to continue the work of dead or silenced journalists. To make their voices heard, to spread their message, to keep their stories alive. A task that – sadly - is becoming more important as the freedom of the press is increasingly besieged.

I am very honoured to welcome Laurent Richard, Executive director and Founder of Forbidden Stories: the EUROPEAN JOURNALIST OF THE YEAR 2018.
