PRODUCT DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

This statement contains important information. Please read it carefully. In particular you should review the "Credit Disclosure" section concerning margin accounts.

DISCLOSURE REQUIRED BY NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE® RULE 382 AND FINRA RULE 3230

International Assets Advisory LLC (IAAC) a member organization of the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA) has a fully disclosed clearing agreement with NFS a member of the New York Stock Exchange and a carrying organization. IAAC has retained NFS to provide certain record keeping and operational services for your account(s), which include execution and settlement of securities transactions, custody of securities and cash balances, and extension of credit on margin transactions, where applicable.

These services are provided under a written Clearing Agreement between IAAC and NFS. You may also have an agreement with an investment advisor (IA), where applicable, who has introduced your account(s) to IAAC pursuant to a New Account Application and Agreement or a Managed Account Application and Agreement you signed (collectively referred to hereafter as "Account Agreement").

It is important that you know of and understand the respective responsibilities that IAAC, NFS, and your IA (if applicable) each have undertaken regarding such account(s). They are set forth as follows:

CREDIT DISCLOSURE

Cash Accounts

Cash accounts may be subject, at NFS's discretion, to interest on any debit balances in U.S. dollars or any other currency resulting from failure to make payment in full for securities purchased, from failure to timely deliver securities sold, from proceeds of sales paid prior to settlement date, or for other charges which may be made to the account.

Margin Accounts

The Account Agreement contains the necessary provisions for you to authorize the opening and maintenance of a Margin Account. Purchases of securities on credit, commonly known as margin purchases, enable you to increase your buying power and thus increase the potential for profit or loss. A portion of the purchase price is deposited when buying securities on margin, and NFS extends credit for the remainder. This loan appears as a debit balance in U.S. dollars or any other currency on your monthly account statement. NFS charges interest on the debit balance in U.S. dollars, or any other currency, and requires you to maintain securities, cash, or other property to secure repayment of funds advanced and interest due.

Interest will be charged in the appropriate currency for any credit extended to you for the purpose of buying, trading, or carrying any securities for any cash withdrawals made against the collateral of securities, or for any other extension of credit. When funds are paid in advance of settlement on the sale of securities, interest will be charged in the appropriate currency on such amount from the date of payment until the settlement date. In the event that any other charge is made to the account in U.S. dollars, or any other currency for any reason, interest may be charged on the resulting debit balances. Interest you pay on the loan may be shared between IAAC and NFS.

Interest Rates

Interest charged on any debit balances in cash accounts or credit extended in margin accounts may be up to 3.00 percentage points above the NFS Base Lending Rate for that currency. A portion of the interest charged by NFS may be shared with IAAC. The NFS Base Lending Rate for each currency will be set with reference to commercially recognized interest rates, industry conditions relating to the extension of credit, and general credit market conditions. For a loan in a currency other than U.S. dollars, the NFS Base Lending Rate will be set based on the above referenced criteria in the country whose currency is the basis of the loan.

The NFS Base Lending Rate for each currency will change without prior notice. When the NFS Base Lending Rate for a particular currency changes during an interest period, interest will be calculated according to the number of days each rate is in effect during that period. If the rate of interest charged to you is changed for any other reason, you will be notified at least 30 days in advance.

Interest Period

The interest period begins on the 20th day of each month and ends on the 19th day of the following month. Accordingly, the interest charges for the period as shown on your monthly statement are based only on the daily net debit and credit balances for the interest period.

Method of Interest Computation

At the close of each interest period during which credit was extended to you, an interest charge is computed by multiplying the average daily debit balance for that currency by the applicable schedule rate and by the number of days during which a debit balance was outstanding and then dividing by 360. If there has been a change in the NFS Base Lending Rate for that currency, separate computations will be made with respect to each rate of charge for the appropriate number of days at each rate during the interest period. If not paid, the interest charge for credit extended to your account at the close of the interest period is added to the opening debit balance for that currency for the next interest period.

With the exception of credit balances in your short account, all other credit and debit balances in the same currency will be combined daily and interest will be charged on the resulting average daily net debit balances for that currency for the interest period. Credit balances in one currency will not be combined or netted with debit balances in a different currency. If there is a debit in your cash account and you hold a margin account, interest will be calculated on the combined debit balance for that currency and charged to the margin account. Any credit balance in your short account is disregarded because such credit collateralizes the stock borrowed for delivery against the short sale. Such credit is disregarded even if you should be long the same position in your margin account (for instance, short sale against the box).

If the security that you sold short (or sold short against the box) appreciates in market price over the selling price, interest will be charged in U.S. dollars, or any other currency, on the appreciation in value. Correspondingly, if the security that you sold short depreciates in market price, the interest charged will be reduced since your average debit balance will decline. This practice is known as "marking-to-the market." Weekly, a closing price is used to determine any appreciation or depreciation of the security sold short. If your account is short shares of stock on the record date of a dividend or other distribution, however such short position occurs, on the following business day, your account will be charged the amount of the dividend or other distribution.

General Margin Policies

The amount of credit that may be extended by NFS and the terms of such extension are governed by regulations of the Federal Reserve Board, rules of the New York Stock Exchange, Inc. and, within the parameters of the foregoing, are subject to published amendments thereto and NFS's business judgment. NFS establishes certain policies with respect to margin accounts. NFS may require the deposit of additional acceptable collateral at any time. Margin account equity is the current market value of securities and cash deposited as security less the amount owed NFS for credit extended at its discretion.

NFS's general policy is to require margin account holders to maintain equity in their accounts of 30 percent of the current market value or $3 per share for common stock (whichever is greater). NFS applies other standards for other types of securities. For instance, securities valued at less than $5 per share may not be purchased in a margin account. Also, certain securities may be ineligible for margin credit from time to time. For information with respect to general margin maintenance policies for municipal bonds, corporate bonds, U.S. Treasury notes and bonds, and other securities, as well as information about the eligibility of particular securities for margin credit, please contact your Account Representative or Investment Advisor .

Notwithstanding the above general policies, IAAC reserves the right, at its discretion, to require the deposit of additional collateral and to set required margin at a higher or lower amount with respect to particular accounts or classes of accounts as it deems necessary. In making these determinations, IAAC may consider various factors including the size of the account, liquidity of a position, concentrations of securities in an account, or a decline in creditworthiness. If you fail to meet a margin call in a timely manner, some or all of your positions may be liquidated.

Deposits of Collateral, Lien on Accounts, and Liquidation

In the event that additional collateral is requested, you may deposit funds or acceptable securities into your margin account. If satisfactory collateral is not promptly deposited after a request is made, either NFS or IAAC may, at its discretion, liquidate securities held in any of your accounts.

In this connection, pursuant to the Margin Agreement section of the Account Agreement, NFS retains an interest in securities and other property held in your accounts, including securities held for safekeeping so long as any credit extended remains outstanding.

Callable Securities

Securities which are held for your account(s) and which are in "street name," or are being held by a securities depository, are commingled with the same securities being held for other clients of financial organizations and for NFS's own clients. Your ownership of these securities is reflected in our records. You have the right at any time to require delivery to you of any such securities that are fully paid for or are in excess of margin requirements.

The terms of many bonds allow the issuer to partially redeem or "call" the issue prior to maturity date. Certain preferred stocks are also subject to being called by the issuer. Whenever any such security being held by NFS is partially "called," it will determine, through a random selection procedure as prescribed by New York Stock Exchange rules, the ownership of the securities to be submitted for redemption without regard to unsettled sales. In the event that such securities owned by you are selected and redeemed, your account(s) will be credited with the proceeds.

Should you not wish to be subject to this random selection process, you or your IA must instruct NFS to deliver your securities to you. Delivery will be effected provided, of course, that your position is unencumbered or had not already been called by the issuer as described prior to receipt by NFS of your instructions. The probability of one of your securities being called is the same, whether it is held by you or by NFS for you.

Miscellaneous Credits

NFS credits to your account(s) funds belonging to you, such as dividends, interest, redemptions, and proceeds of corporate reorganizations on the day such funds are received by NFS. These funds come to NFS from issuers and various intermediaries in which NFS is a participant, such as the Depository Trust Clearing Corporation. Periodically, certain of those intermediaries pass on to their participants some or all of the interest earned on funds while in the possession of the intermediary. To the extent NFS receives such payments, NFS retains them. Information regarding when NFS credits your account(s) with funds due to you, when those funds are available to you, and/or when you begin earning interest on those funds, is available from IAAC.

Substitute Payments

To the extent NFS determines (in accordance with federal income tax regulations) that your securities have been loaned, certain payments you receive with respect to such loaned securities will be reclassified as "substitute payments." The tax consequences of receiving substitute payments may be different than the tax consequences of receiving payments made by an issuer of an underlying security. For instance, a dividend received by an individual may be taxed at a preferential rate if the dividend is a qualified dividend, whereas if an individual receives a substitute payment, the preferential rate for qualified dividends will not apply.

Individuals may also be affected if certain payments (such as exempt interest dividends, capital gain distributions, return of capital, and foreign tax credit dividends) are reclassified as substitute payments. Corporate taxpayers could also be affected because the dividends received deduction is not available with respect to substitute payments. We suggest you contact your tax advisor to discuss the tax treatment of substitute payments.

As permitted under your margin agreement, NFS may lend shares in your account when your account has a debit balance. In the instance where securities are on loan over an ex-dividend date, NFS may issue a substitute payment to the account in lieu of the dividend, and subsequently a tax differential reimbursement. Substitute payments received in 2007 and forward, however, may be eligible for a reimbursement to the lender's account only if the account is open on the reimbursement date. Please note that these reimbursements are subject to change and may be eliminated without advanced notification.

SPECIAL NOTE FOR NON-U.S. PERSON'S ACCOUNTS

With respect to assets custodied by NFS on your behalf, income and capital gains or distributions to you from your account may be taxable in your country of domicile. Please consult your tax advisor for the appropriate tax treatment of your transactions.

MUTUAL FUND BREAKPOINT DISCOUNTS AND OTHER DISCLOSURES RELATING TO MUTUAL FUND, MONEY FUND, FDIC-INSURED BANK DEPOSITS, AND ANNUITY FEES AND REVENUE SHARING

Before investing in mutual funds, it is important that you understand the sales charges, expenses, and management fees that you will be charged, as well as the breakpoint discounts to which you may be entitled. Understanding these charges and breakpoint discounts will assist you in identifying the best investment for your particular needs and may help you to reduce the cost of your investment. This section will give you general background information about these charges and discounts; however, sales charges, expenses, management fees, and breakpoint discounts vary from mutual fund to mutual fund.

Therefore, where applicable, you should discuss these matters with your IA and review each mutual fund's prospectus and statement of additional information (available from your IA) to obtain the specific information regarding the charges and breakpoint discounts associated with a particular mutual fund.

Event Sponsorship Fees Disclosure

Mutual fund companies, annuity companies, and other solution providers offer marketing support in the form of payments to NFS (or third parties at NFS's direction) in connection with educational conferences, events, seminars, and workshops for broker-dealers or investment professionals. These payments maybe for the expenses of educational materials or other conference-related expenses. For a listing of companies that pay contributions to NFS for events, please refer to <https://nationalfinancial.fidelity.com/advisor/portal/login>.

Sales Charges

Investors who purchase mutual funds must make certain choices, including which funds to purchase and which share class is most advantageous in light of their specific investing needs. Each mutual fund has a specified investment strategy. These decisions will be made by you and/or your IA, subject to your agreements with them. You and they should consider whether the mutual fund's investment strategy is compatible with your investment objectives. Additionally, many mutual funds offer different share classes. Although each share class represents a similar interest in the mutual fund's portfolio, the mutual fund will charge you different fees and expenses depending upon your choice of share class.

As a general rule, Class A shares carry a "front-end" sales charge or "load" that is deducted from your investment at the time you buy the fund shares. This sales charge is a percentage of your total purchase. As explained below, many mutual funds offer volume discounts, known as "breakpoint discounts," to the front-end sales charge assessed on Class A shares at certain predetermined levels of investment.

In contrast, Class B and C shares usually do not carry any front-end sales charges. Instead, investors who purchase Class B or C shares pay asset-based sales charges, which may be higher or lower than the charges associated with Class A shares. Investors that purchase Class B or C shares may also be required to pay a sales charge known as a "contingent deferred sales charge" when they sell their shares, depending upon the rules of the particular mutual fund. This is known as a "back-end" sales charge or the "load."

Breakpoint Discounts

Most mutual funds offer investors a variety of ways to qualify for breakpoint discounts on the sales charge associated with the purchase of Class A shares. In general, most mutual funds provide breakpoint discounts to investors who make large purchases at one time. The extent of the discount depends upon the size of the purchase. Generally, as the amount of the purchase increases, the percentage used to determine the sales load decreases. The entire sales charge may be waived for investors that make very large purchases of Class A shares. Mutual fund prospectuses contain tables that illustrate the available breakpoint discounts and the investment levels at which breakpoint discounts apply.

Additionally, most mutual funds allow investors to qualify for breakpoint discounts based upon current holdings from prior purchases through Rights of Accumulation (ROA) and from future purchases based upon Letters of Intent (LOI). Mutual funds have different rules regarding the availability of ROAs and LOIs. Therefore, where applicable, you should discuss these matters with your IA and SAM(s), and review the mutual fund's prospectus and statement of additional information to determine the specific terms upon which a mutual fund offers ROAs or LOIs.

Rights of Accumulation

Many mutual funds allow investors to count the value of previous purchases of the same fund, or another fund within the same fund family, with the value of the current purchase to qualify for breakpoint discounts. Moreover, mutual funds may allow investors to count existing holdings in multiple accounts, such as individual retirement accounts (IRAs) or accounts at other financial organizations, to qualify for breakpoint discounts. Therefore, if you have accounts at other financial organizations and wish to take advantage of the balances in these accounts to qualify for a breakpoint discount, you must advise your IA about those balances. You may need to provide documentation if you wish to rely upon balances in accounts at another firm. In addition, many mutual funds allow investors to count the value of holdings in accounts of certain related parties, such as spouses or children, to qualify for breakpoint discounts.

Mutual funds also follow different rules to determine the value of existing holdings. Some funds use the current net asset value (NAV) of existing investments to establish whether an investor qualifies for a breakpoint discount. Mutual funds also follow different rules to determine the value of existing holdings. Some funds use the current net asset value (NAV) of existing investments to establish whether an investor qualifies for a breakpoint discount.

However, a small number of funds use the historical cost, which is the initial purchase cost, to determine eligibility for breakpoint discounts. If the mutual fund uses historical costs, you may need to provide account records, such as confirmation statements or monthly statements, to qualify for a breakpoint discount based upon previous purchases. You should consult with your IA and SAM(s) and review the mutual fund's prospectus and statement of additional information to determine whether the mutual fund uses NAV or historical costs to establish breakpoint eligibility.

Letters of Intent (LOI)

Most mutual funds allow investors to qualify for breakpoint discounts by signing a LOI, which commits the investor to purchase a specified amount of Class A shares within a defined period of time, usually 13 months. For instance, if an investor plans to purchase $50,000 worth of Class A shares over a period of 13 months, but each individual purchase would not qualify for a breakpoint discount, the investor could sign a LOI at the time of the first purchase and receive the breakpoint discount associated with a $50,000 investment on the first and all subsequent purchases.

Additionally, some funds offer retroactive LOIs that allows investors to rely upon recent purchases to qualify for a breakpoint discount. However, if an investor fails to invest the amount required by the LOI, the fund is entitled to retroactively deduct the correct sales charges based upon the amount that the investor actually invested. If you intend to make several purchases within a 13-month period, you should consult your IA and applicable SAM(s) and the mutual fund prospectus to determine if it would be beneficial for you to sign a LOI. As you can see, understanding the availability of breakpoint discounts is important because it may allow you to purchase Class A shares at a lower price. The availability of breakpoint discounts may save you money and may also affect your decision regarding the appropriate share class in which to invest. Therefore, where applicable, you should discuss the availability of breakpoint discounts with your IA and SAM and carefully review the mutual fund prospectus and its statement of additional information when choosing among the share classes offered by a mutual fund. If you wish to learn more about mutual fund share classes or mutual fund breakpoints, you can also review the investor alerts available on the FINRA web site at: <http://www.finra.org/InvestorInformation/InvestorAlerts/MutualFunds/UnderstandingMutualFundClasses/index.htm> and <http://www.finra.org/InvestorInformation/InvestorAlerts/MutualFunds/MutualFundBreakpointsABreakWorthTaking/index.htm>

Business Continuity

IAAC, in conjunction with its affiliates, maintains a business continuity plan (the Plan) that covers the resumption of business processes for each IAAC department in the event of a business interruption, consistent with applicable regulations, including FINRA Rule 3510. Additionally, IAAC policy requires formal semi-annual reviews, including business risk assessments of the Plan. Mutual Funds

There are risks involved when investing in Mutual Funds, including possible loss of principal. In addition to the normal risks associated with equity investing, investments in smaller companies typically exhibit higher volatility, and when these products replicate indexes weighted in smaller capitalization stocks they share the same risk/return attributes of those stocks and of those indexes. Investors should consider the investment objectives, risks, charges, and expenses before investing. The prospectus contains this and other information.

UITs

UITs are fixed and not actively managed. The market value of units will fluctuate, and when sold, may be worth less than the original cost, potentially resulting in a loss. The value of each unit will fluctuate with the underlying securities. Investing in securities denominated in currencies other than the US Dollar involves certain considerations comprising both risk and opportunity not typically associated with investing in US securities. Risks also include political and government restrictions which might adversely affect the payment or receipt of payment of income on foreign securities, fluctuations in foreign securities, exchange rates, limited liquidity, lack of public information and the risk of price volatility. Please consult a tax professional regarding the tax consequences.

Exchange Traded Funds

Exchange-traded funds (ETFs) are an increasingly popular class of index funds that trade like stocks. They can be bought or sold throughout the market day, and offer portfolio exposure to the world's leading indexes. Exchange traded funds are subject to risks similar to those of stocks. Investment returns will fluctuate and are subject to market volatility, so that an investor's shares, when redeemed or sold, may be worth more or less than their original cost.

Foreign Securities and Currency

Investing in securities denominated in currencies other than the US Dollar involves certain considerations comprising both risk and opportunity not typically associated with investing in US securities. Risks also include political and government restrictions which might adversely affect the payment or receipt of payment of income on foreign securities fluctuations in foreign securities, exchange rates, limited liquidity, lack of public information and the risk of price volatility. Please consult a tax professional regarding the tax consequences.

Fixed Income Products/Bonds and Municipal Bonds

Fixed-income investments are subject to various risks, including changes in interest rates, credit quality, market valuations, liquidity, prepayments, corporate events, tax ramifications, and other factors. Please discuss these and other factors with your account executive before investing in these products. Bonds are subject to changes in interest rates, risk of defaults by the issuer, and the loss of purchasing power due to inflation.

While such a strategy does not guarantee a profit or against loss, a diversified portfolio can minimize these risks because the risk is distributed over a variety of investments. In a well-balanced investment portfolio, some holdings may be negatively affected by market changes, while others may have a positive reaction, thus balancing the portfolio. Virtually all investments have some degree of risk. When investing in bonds, it's important to remember that an investment's return is linked to its risk.

Risks common to most all bonds include:

Credit Risk – financial risk that the issuer will not be able to repay the principal upon maturity as promised

Call Risk – longer-term bonds are usually callable. The bonds may be called before the maturity date if interest rates decrease

Market Risk – if the bond must be sold before the maturity date, the bond may be worth more or less than the face value depending on interest rate movements.

Inflation Risk – recognizes the value of assets or of income will be eroded as inflation shrinks the value of a country's currency.

Liquidity Risk – some securities are very hard to sell if there is a thin trading market or if the bond is relatively unknown.
