It started in 2011, when a group of former violent extremists committed to a singular cause: Anyone wanting to leave a hate group would never have to do it alone.

Today, far-right extremism and white supremacy are the greatest domestic terror threats facing the United States.

We know that hateful ideology is not a prerequisite for joining a hate group: Alienation, trauma, shame, and abuse are common denominators.

And research shows that many violent extremists become disillusioned with the so-called “movement.”

Our goal is to offer an exit strategy for men and women ready to leave hate behind once and for all.

Since the deadly “Unite the Right” rally in Charlottesville, VA in August 2017, we’ve helped more than 500 people and families.

How We Help

ExitUSA™
Operated by highly developed and empathic formers, ExitUSA™ is our flagship intervention program.
It provides around-the-clock tailored support, education, and referral services to ensure people can build a new, more fulfilling life, free from hate.

Our work is safely implemented virtually, and is completely anonymous and confidential.

This year despite the COVID-19 crisis, we hired more staff and added additional resources, including technological solutions that can better connect those individuals who need our services most.

Participation in ExitUSA™ is voluntary and is each experience is designed to meet the client’s risk, needs, and goals.

Many cases are long-term, requiring more than 70 interactions.
