Understanding Your Experience

Mental illness is not the end, but an opportunity to see God's grace guide you into greater wholeness of life. God never defines or sees you as an illness. God has lavished you with unmeasured grace. His grace pours out love and redefines you as worthy. Grace is now your new constant identity and worth.

What is a mental illness?

Mental illness is ...

“Genetic or circumstantial factors causing a disruption in the brain affecting a person’s thoughts, moods, behaviors, and relationships. The severity of symptoms requires professional treatment, whole-health (holistic) care, and life-giving community support.”

Mental illness affects the brain, which in turn affects your whole life ... physically, mentally, spiritually, and relationally. As you learn about your mental health condition and how it affects your life, it is good to remember the balance between having a mental health disorder vs. the diagnosis becoming a full personal identity.

Friend, you are not the illness or disorder. Mental illness is part of the journey and God is not intimidated by it! You are a child of God, fully cherished, loved, and accepted by God. God longs to reveal His compassion and hope at every step of this journey.

Mental illness is NOT...

... your identity.

God never defines or sees you as an illness. God has lavished you with unmeasured grace. God’s grace pours out love and redefines you as worthy. Grace is now your new constant identity and worth. You are forever positioned with love, mercy, and grace.

... your fault or failure.

You are not being cruelly punished or judged for not being enough for God. God is love and that is His constant nature toward you because you are worth everything to Him.

Can I recover from mental illness?

We can approach mental illness in a similar way that we would approach any other physical injury or illness: by looking at the whole body to develop a plan for care (whole-health approach).

The journey towards mental health is a strength-based and whole-health (holistic) process of change that focuses on rebuilding:

- + Self-worth and purpose
- + Self-management and whole-health lifestyle for symptom relief
- + Life-giving community support
- + Pure and simple rest in God's love and grace

There are no easy answers and no list of action points that will be effective in every situation. Sometimes, it may feel frustrating and confusing, but this guide will reaffirm that you are moving in the right direction.

In this book, we are giving guidance for the journey, not specific tasks to achieve complete mental health.

In every part of the journey, remember to walk in God's grace that He has lavished upon us.

Mental Health Recovery is a continuum of growth.

Mental health is not just about achieving specific steps. It is a process that takes time, faith and patience – a continuum of growth. The diagram below represents this continuum of what mental health recovery looks like for someone in the journey.

DISTRESS (Immobilized)

Symptoms are overwhelming and there may be feelings of hopelessness, confusion and hurt.

STABILITY (Hope)

Symptoms are still challenging, but now learning new ways to manage and have renewed hope.

FUNCTION (Resilience)

Symptoms are manageable and able to function with life as you are building strength and resiliency.

PURPOSE (Renewal)

You are no longer driven by symptoms. You are experiencing healthy relationships and life has a God-given purpose.

Understanding Your Needs

A woman with long blonde hair, wearing a white fedora-style hat and a white and blue striped off-the-shoulder top, is seen from behind. She is standing in front of a window, looking out at a street scene. The street has a utility pole, a tree, and a house in the background. The overall tone is bright and airy.

God created each of us as complex, unique being, and He knows our every need. Yet, God's best and most beautiful miracles are done over the long haul. Typically, mental health recovery is not about finding a complete cure, but it is a process of building resiliency and resting in God's grace – a life renewed.

What is “whole-health”?

The Whole-Health Approach and Needs

As you address your needs, here are some areas to consider. These topics are discussed in-depth with accompanying education, self-evaluation and tools in our Thrive Workbook.

Spiritual Needs:

- Identity
- Spiritual Growth
- Prayer

Mental Needs:

- Psychotherapy/Counseling
- Healthy Thinking
- Positive Coping/Stress Management
- Creative Mental Activities
- Cycles and Triggers

Physical Needs:

- Sleep
- Medication
- Relaxation
- Nutrition
- Exercise

Relational Needs:

- Encouragement
- Supportive Listening
- Opportunities to Serve Community

What are my physical needs?

1. Sleep

Trouble with sleep is common with mental health challenges and can make symptoms worse. The keys to getting good sleep are:

- Sleep Routine – Determine a healthy schedule and routine; 7.5 – 9 hours of sleep.
- Sleep Hygiene – Find creative ideas to help wind down before sleep.
- Sleep Diary – Keep a log to monitor your sleep habits and progress.

2. Medication

Not everyone needs medication. However, medication can be one helpful tool for individuals experiencing mental health difficulties. Always educate yourself about any medications that you are prescribed. Here are a few tips on medication:

- Psychiatrist or Therapist – Either can help determine if you need medication.
- Medication – Keep a record of the medication, type and dosage.
- Side Effects – Communicate with your doctor about challenging side effects.
- Progress – Monitor your overall progress, don't feel stuck with medications.

3. Relaxation

Relaxation techniques, like muscle relaxation and paced breathing, can be done on a daily basis to decrease stress and can be helpful during episodes of panic and anxiety.

4. Nutrition

Evaluate your overall eating habits. A healthy diet helps your brain function and also enhances the effects of medication.

5. Exercise

Simple, daily physical activity is recommended. The benefits can help relieve anxiety and depressive symptoms.

What are my mental needs?

1. Psychotherapy / Counseling

Therapy in conjunction with medication has been shown to be the most effective approach to treating mental illness. See page 17 for more information.

2. Healthy Thinking

Simple tools to address ongoing negative thinking, identify stressors and discover healthy thinking solutions are essential for the recovery process. There are a variety resources, professional therapists, mental health coaches and supportive community environments that can help reinforce this. Simple exercises include:

- Gratitude – List three things and people you are thankful to have in your life.
- Affirming Security – Remind yourself they are just thoughts, not really you.
- Reframing Security -
 - a) Understand what the specific negative thoughts are (normal to everyone).
 - b) Understand they are irrational thoughts and can be challenged.
 - c) Understand you can reframe positive and secure thoughts.

3. Positive Coping / Stress Management

Identifying stressors and simple solutions to create healthy coping skills will greatly aid in defusing difficult symptoms.

- Breathing exercise
- Muscle relaxation
- Mindfulness
- Healthy distractions

4. Creative Mental Activities

Mentally refreshing and stimulating activities are highly therapeutic and will help create opportunities to experience positive rest. Ideas could include:

- Painting
- Puzzles
- Games (e.g., word games, Tetris, Solitaire, etc.)
- Playing music

5. Cycles and Triggers

Understanding the patterns and cycles of your specific symptoms (e.g., depression every winter) and triggers (e.g., holidays) is key in being prepared to manage ongoing stability.

- Cycles – Be aware of the patterns of how often throughout the year you experience different episodes of depression, anxiety, or other challenges. Are they the same time every year (seasons, end of school year, work calendar)? Do you see them more often due to stressful events?
- Triggers – Be aware of certain things that seem to trigger depression, anxiety, or other challenges (e.g., school, work, relationships, finances, spiritual, crowds, holidays, etc.)?

What are my spiritual needs?

Keep it Simple

When going through depression, anxiety, or other similar challenges, it's important to keep it simple. The Lord knows how exhausted you feel, so only do what you desire and can do. This is about growing in love, NOT more pressured devotion. Love naturally grows into more, so start with what seems most loving.

The list below includes only simple concepts to encourage and explore a starting point (or add to your current devotion) for your personal devotion / spiritual journey.

1. Identity

Circumstances, struggles and disorders do not define who we are, God does. Our identity is redefined by His love toward us.

- Grace Made You Complete in Christ (loved, forgiven, & free)
John 16:27; Colossians 2:10; Ephesians 1:7; Hebrews 8:12; Romans 8:15; Galatians 5:1
- Grace Made You Strong in Christ
Ephesians 1:3, 18-19; Romans 8:31-39; 1 John 4:4-5; Philippians 4:13
- Grace Made You to Belong (always) – Christ in you
John 6:35-37; John 14:20; Romans 8:10; Galatians 2:20; Ephesians 2:4-7; Ephesians 3:17; Colossians 1:27; 1 John 3:24

2. Spiritual Growth

Focus on God's loving nature and character to be faithful to us, even in troubling times. Keep in mind that God gives these to you, He never demands them from you.

- Love is His Constant toward You and in You
John 3:16-17; John 16:27; Ephesians 3:17b-19; 1 John 4:8, 16; Revelation 1:5
- Peace is Your New State of Being and What You Have with God
Psalm 29:11; John 16:33; Romans 5:1; Romans 15:13; 2 Thessalonians 3:16
- He is Our Comforter, Validating Your Pain and Giving New Hope
Psalm 119:76; John 14:16; Romans 5:3-5; 2 Corinthians 1:3-4; 2 Corinthians 4:16-18

3. Prayer

Even when we feel far from God or unable to connect with Him, He is still there. First, know that Jesus is the intercessor for you. He is always for you, never against you. Second, keep prayer simple and real as it pertains to your life and for others. In other words, if you care about it, He cares about it, so talk to Him about it!

- Jesus Interceding for You
Luke 22:31-32; Romans 8:27; Romans 8:34; Hebrews 4:15; Hebrews 7:24-25
- Asking for Strength and Perspective When Feeling Weak
Mark 9:24; Romans 8:15; Romans 8:26; Ephesians 2:18; Colossians 1:9-12
- Asking for the Wellbeing of Others (Relationships and Needs)
John 15:12-16; Ephesians 3:14-16; Ephesians 6:18; 1 Timothy 2:1-2; Hebrews 13:18-19

What are my relational needs?

1. Life-Giving Community

Isolation can be common when you're experiencing difficult symptoms. Yet, comfort, encouragement and support from a caring community and church are vitally important in the healing and mental health recovery process.

2. Stigma and Shame

While secular and spiritual stigma may still be present, learning about other men and women who have walked through severe mental health challenges, like Martin Luther and Mother Theresa, can offer great encouragement.

3. Opportunities to Serve

As stability is regained, look for simple ways to serve and bless others. Helping others leads to restoration as it reinforces personal value and worth.

— Additional Needs —

Celebrate Progress

At times, it may be difficult to recognize or see the positive progress. To stay encouraged, celebrate even your small steps to build confidence and strengthen yourself for difficult times that may come.

Employment or Education

As your condition improves and you have extended periods of stability, you may want to find a job or return back to school. It is important that you find a job and/or a school in which you can thrive and be successful without escalating symptoms. If you are returning to school or a career, take it step by step. Jumping back in quickly can make you feel overwhelmed. Ease yourself back in and don't push too hard.

Understanding Your Care

There is hope and you are not alone! There are wonderful resources, tools and support to aid you on your journey toward mental health recovery. God is with you through each step of your process and He can provide for your needs in a variety of ways.

Where can I find help?

The Professionals

1. General Practitioner

Family Doctor or Physician who can do initial evaluation and refer you to a specialist.

2. Psychiatrist

Evaluates symptoms and prescribes and monitors medications for symptom reduction/relief.

3. Psychotherapist (PsyD/Ph.D.)

Works and specializes in mental health diagnoses (e.g., Cognitive Behavioral Therapy – CBT and other specialized therapy models).

4. Counselor (MFT/LPC/LCSW or LMSW/other)

Works with various therapy models for interpersonal and internal challenges. Some are qualified and specialize in mental health diagnoses by incorporating CBT and other specialized therapy models (ask).

5. Intensive Outpatient Program (IOP)

Professional therapeutic programs facilitated during the week (half/full days) with education and tools.

6. Certified Specialist Coach/Mental Health Coach (peers)

Certified to coach and work with mental health needs and often work in conjunction with professionals. Often used in state service programs. Peer services and coaches are effective with evidence-based research / results.

Community Support

Mental illness can often lead to feelings of loneliness and isolation. However, research shows that community is imperative to mental health recovery! Thankfully, there are some great options available and more are being introduced every day.

1. Grace Alliance Grace Groups and Resources \(pg. 22\)

We offer helpful, grace-filled resources and mental health curriculum for community small groups that work in any denomination and church.

2. Fresh Hope Groups

Family and loved ones in combined group with discussion centered on biblical tenets (scriptures) and mental health recovery principles.

3. National Alliance on Mental Illness \(NAMI\)

Free educational courses and support groups for those in the mental health journey and their families.

How do I navigate the mental health care system and find community support?

1. Consult with a family physician / general practitioner.

Have a complete physical and blood work evaluated for possible primary or secondary causes. Consult with your doctor concerning recommendations and referrals to trusted psychiatrists. Many psychiatrists not presently taking new patients will accept someone if referred by another physician. If you do not have a family physician or clinic, consult with any urgent medical care facility to conduct initial lab work evaluations and utilize their referrals to other professionals.

2. Find a psychotherapist / counselor and psychiatrist.

These mental health professionals are equipped to conduct psychological evaluations and start a process for care (medication, therapy, etc.). Quality mental health care should be purposeful, consistent and ongoing.

3. Find local community mental health support.

Seek out mental health agencies, organizations or ministries in your area that provide support, education and resources (The Grace Alliance, NAMI, Fresh Hope, etc.).

4. Develop a whole-health plan.

As you gather support and resources, evaluate each area of life (mental, physical, spiritual, relational) to establish a care plan. For more information, refer to our Thrive Workbook or our Living Grace Group or Redefine Grace Group (students) workbook.

5. Know the acute crisis support and hospitalizations.

Many cities have a crisis response team to help provide an assessment during difficult times. Find these numbers at any local mental health agencies (NAMI affiliates or hospitals). If hospitalization is necessary, it usually only lasts 2-4 days (longer if needed).

Finances / Insurance

1. Insurance

Consult your insurance plan for available doctors/therapists in your network. If you can't get an appointment, your family doctor can refer you to a psychiatrist and/or therapist.

2. No Insurance

Consult with the various family clinics or state-run services in your area that provide professional mental health services. Be patient because these state-run services are generally full and have a longer waiting period to see a professional.

3. Can't Afford Services

Look into government entitlement programs (SSI, SSDI, Medicaid, Medicare, food stamps, assisted housing). This type of assistance will greatly increase the number of mental health care options available to you. This is not a sign of failure! These services were intended to help when mental health disorders interfere with life.

Other Items to Be Aware Of

1. Release of Information Consent

If you are 18 or older, consider signing a release form for your doctors, therapists and insurance to be able to discuss your care and treatment with other medical professionals and trusted family members. This will help your professionals and support system work as a team. Include trusted individuals who can help you navigate your overall care.

2. Keep Your Information Organized

There will be a lot of paperwork, so keep a record of your professional care, including:

- Dates of diagnoses
- Hospitalizations
- Copies of psych. assessments
- Medical records
- Contact info for doctors/therapists
- History of medication/treatments
- Insurance/Medicare/Medicaid info
