

Meet Marc Lebert

OUR OCTOBER 9TH GUEST ARTIST

I was born a painter. From a very young age, I knew that but became socialized into sports and athletics and did very well with that, competing at a national level in Taekwondo, owning a gym and even creating my fitness equipment, the Lebert Equalizers™ that are used worldwide. I was a closet artist though (I took art classes in University and didn't tell anyone) but as I got older I embraced my passion and my true love, painting. I paint almost every day and sometimes all night!

I have been called a "colourist" by other artists and my style is most often described as energetic, colourful, prolific and eclectic. If there is one consistent thing about my style it's that I don't really have one. I just love to explore; I "hear" colours, and "feel" movement and I love to take risks with my work. Painting is where I feel the energy (and love) of the universe and where I feel most happy.

I don't have any formal training, lots of experience experimenting, no awards (although my mom liked my art LOL!), and have had many exhibitions (over 10 shows) that I put on myself. Right now I sell via my gym, shows, past clients and through Instagram and Facebook.

And my absolute favourite thing is to see my work get out there into the world for others to enjoy.

President's Message

Hello everyone! Are you all ready for Halloween? If any of you know me, you will know that it is my favourite time of year! I love all things Halloween.

Thank you to everyone who participated in Convergence Festival this year. We had artists doing demonstrations throughout the day, and our information booth was busy with kids making masks and volunteers having fun! The festival was bigger than I imagined it would be and I am hoping to have the OAA more involved next year.

I am looking forward to our FAF this coming weekend. We have a full house and seven artists demonstrating. Our FAF team has been working over the last several months to get everything organized. Thank you all for your hard work!

See you all next week at our Monthly Members Meeting.

Karen Coyle

If you haven't renewed your OAA membership for 2024, now is the time. We offer reduced rates from now until the end of this year. Please go to www.oshawaartassociation.com/oaa-store we miss you!

October Challenge

It's time to show off the skills you learned in September at Dana's demo and Angela's workshop.

Please send your jpegs by October 25 to newsletter.oaa@gmail.com. Be sure to include the title and website if you have one.

Join the Team!

One of the perks of being an OAA member is the opportunity to exhibit your artwork at The Robert McLaughlin Gallery in an exclusive juried art show.

How does this happen you ask?

By volunteers like YOU dedicating a few hours to organizing, and working with like-minded artists. OAA is fortunate that RMG allows us to feature our artists in their outstanding space. Let's not lose this opportunity!

As a team member, you will meet the artists as they deliver their work and be the first to see their art. We have a good committee and many helpers, so you don't have to recruit people to work with you. This is a great way to make new friends and renew acquaintances in the arts community. Joan has a plan of what needs to be done and will be happy to train the new co-chairs.

OAA handles the fundraising and promotion.

STATION GALLERY

Paint like a Musician Workshop with Chas Burke

In this one-session workshop, participants will learn to use colour mapping to create both a still-life, and an abstract painting. Referencing the methods of famous composers, participants will explore how to harmonize and balance their colours to make each painting expressive and cohesive. Both music and art make use of hue, value, temperature, composition, and design; experienced artist and musician Chas Burke will help you harness these elements, and take you on a journey resulting in the creation of two beautiful paintings for you to bring home with you! Suitable for all levels of expertise. No music experience required. All materials provided.

Fall Art Festival

The 41st annual festival is shaping up great thanks to the efforts of Kathy and the amazing committee!

If you are not one of the participating artists, be sure to stop by and tell your family and friends about this annual art show featuring original work by local artists.

It's shaping up to be an exciting weekend with live music by Tom Hodgson on the keyboard, fabulous art, demonstrations by seven talented artists and tasty treats by Berry Hill.

The Spring Art Festival will be the weekend of May 10, 2025. Kathy and the team would love to chat with you about the next show, be sure to drop them a line. ✍

The importance of being an active volunteer

By now most of you know that PineRidge Arts Council (established in 1989) has been disbanded. It highlights the challenges that many volunteer-driven groups face.

Groups like PRAC and OAA serve a crucial role in supporting local artists and bringing people together around shared goals. We all have busy lives, but there is something special that comes from working towards a shared goal that is irreplaceable.

What will YOUR new arts adventure be with OAA? ✍

Greetings from the Artist Within!

by Lauren Walker

I hope each and every one of you had a wonderful summer. Time is passing so quickly, it is very hard to keep up. I'd love to share a few quick achievements I've experienced which will bring me to the heart of this article.

I'm a published Artist

It is quite a boon for me to be published in not just one book, but four! I'm happy to share that I'm a part of three publications by the "Arts to Hearts Project". These books feature female artists from all around the world.

- Women and Art
- Lines and Curves
- The Creative Process

My work will be featured in all three publications and these books may be available online very soon so check them out! As Part of my "Lines and Curves" publication, I am also included in their online virtual exhibition: <https://artstoheartsproject.com/the-lines-and-curves-virtual-exhibition/> you can find my award winning piece "Queen St, Port Perry in the early 1900s" on display!

My fourth publication sees my work published in Artist Close Up Magazine's #22 edition with my work being featured! You can also see my online interview <https://www.artistcloseup.com/blog/interview-lauren-walker>

I've been fortunate enough to participate in a virtual show with the Holy Art Gallery and you can check out that show by checking <https://theholysart.com/ethos-room-i>

I've been fortunate to also have my work featured in the Holy Art Gallery Art on Loop shows in Barcelona, London and soon to be Toronto! All that has happened over the course of the summer and I have to admit, it's been a wonderful experience.

Finding the Artist Within

I appreciate you letting me indulge in some of my accomplishments but I assure you, there is always a method to my madness. I am certainly not one who thrives on attention and I'm usually one to keep my head down and get to work. I often wonder what it means to be an artist. What does it mean to you? It's a great source of pride to be able to live my dream and share it with the world. I suppose that is the underlying message I want to convey. I've really only been at this for four years. I was amazed at my very first solo show in January 2023 at the Kent Farndale Gallery. A bunch of people showed up for my opening reception and no one was more surprised than I.

There's always nagging doubt in the mind of every artist. Are we really good enough? I've learned, you don't have to be the best at something in order to love it wholeheartedly. It certainly wasn't my best work at my first show but somehow I knew that it didn't matter! I tried my best and was proud of my achievement.

I allowed myself to stand within the moment and absorb the fact that a dream had come true. People had faith in me and I had faith in me too. At my show, I met many seasoned artists who walked up to me and asked, "How did you do this?" Upon speaking with them, I learned they've never had a show of their own. Although I soon realized that many artists spend their life doing what they love but don't have the courage to put it out there. I admit, I am of the opposite thinking. I feel like I was born to do this and so I must brave my fears and take my shot. Its never too late to chase your dream, I don't care what stage of life you're in.

Follow your Art

When I was thinking about the subject of this article, I wondered which way I should go. The truth is, it's not about me at all. I will always take the opportunity to share what I love with others. Why? I hope it encourages you to do what you love without hesitation. Don't let fear stand in the way of your dream! You may look at your art work and feel fear that people won't like it. Art is a reflection of who we are as individuals. If people don't like my work, who cares? If I was afraid of what people thought, I wouldn't be doing this.

If something scares you, it means you're on the right path. Art is from the deepest part of us and yes, it is scary to put yourself out there. Having faith in yourself is the key here. I assure you, the fear of not being accepted fades away. Accept yourself as the imperfect being you are and share your unique gift with others.

The world needs more people like you!

You don't have to show your work in Barcelona, London or Toronto in order to be successful. I'd happily paint my life away even if I never made a penny. Having the courage to try is the true success. I encourage you to step out of your comfort zone and get your work out there. Take a chance on yourself!

Happy painting,

ABOUT THOSE ANNOYING SCAMS

Lucy E.M. Black

At the dinner hour, the land-line telephone we still maintain often rings to warn us that some kind soul at Amazon has had to flag an unusual purchase, and all we have to do is provide our banking information for them to reverse the charges. A similar call, often early in the morning when we're still half asleep, is from a benevolent party at the Canada Revenue Agency, warning us that unpaid taxes mean we are soon to be arrested by the RCMP. Another regular caller is an important-sounding representative from Microsoft, informing us that our computer has been infected with a destructive virus and we must take corrective action immediately or all of our files, accounts and data will be corrupted. A couple of people we know, have received urgent calls from errant grandchildren and children requesting bail money. And there are also the bi-weekly check-ins from a call centre far away to offer us a great deal on duct cleaning.

Having grown weary of the constant assault of such scams, I have done a little research. The following outlines some useful information I have gleaned and some important websites for all of us to be aware of. I am by no means an expert on these matters, but I hope that my notes help us all to be a little more aware and cautious.

The following website Identify a scam or fraud | ontario.ca brings you to a Government of Ontario website for identifying scams or frauds. The website has some very useful information. Scams are schemes attempting to trick people into sharing personal, financial information and/or money. These typically begin with the scammer utilizing a little bit of information about you and pretending to be someone you know or someone from a company or service that you utilize. I recently had a call from PayPal informing me of a problem with my account information. I hung up the phone and called PayPal directly only to discover, as I suspected, that there was nothing amiss with my account information and I had been contacted by a scammer. In order to protect yourself, always call your contact back directly through normal channels when you receive a suspicious phone call.

There are several different types of scams that we should all be aware of, and most of them involve phishing (fishing) to some degree – using whatever information is readily available about you to establish enough trust so that they can solicit more. Besides the annoying telephone scammer phone calls, there are at least six other such scams that we should know something about. These definitions come from the Government of Ontario website:

Hyperlinks – you are asked to select a hyperlink that takes you to a website that gathers personal details about you such as interests and recent online activity.

Text (SMS) – you receive a text message from a scammer that asks for your financial and personal information through text messaging are asked by text to click a link that takes you to a website, in order to collect your financial and personal information (i.e., full name, date of birth, banking/credit card information).

Telephone – you receive a phone call from a scammer enticing you to give them financial and personal information. In many cases, these scammers have a sense of urgency or tell you that you need to act immediately.

Email – you receive an email from a scammer impersonating a known institution or business with a hyperlink or downloadable document that is designed to collect your financial and personal information. These are often very convincing, complete with letterhead, photographs and graphics snagged from the original.

Social media – you receive messages on social media platforms pretending to be customer support asking you to share financial and personal information.

QR codes – you receive a QR code, usually by email, that takes you to a malicious website designed to collect your financial and personal information.

Warning signs to be aware of when you are contacted by someone requesting money, or personal or financial information:

They may attempt to exert pressure, asking you, with great urgency, to make a quick decision or something terrible will happen;

They may request privacy, asking you not to share information with the authorities or others;

They may request gift cards or bitcoin or prepaid credit cards (this is a common one – we have received emails allegedly from friends on holiday, requesting gift cards);

The request for financial or personal information comes with a link or attachment to an unknown sender.

Some recommended best practices, include:

Protect yourself by ignoring emails from unknown senders;

Never open attachments from someone you don't know;

Never follow links to sites or individuals you don't know;

Remember that legitimate websites encrypt confidential information and details;

Look at the web address – it should read https and not http;

Never send confidential information over email or text;

Change your passwords regularly and keep them confidential;

Utilize a reputable software program that helps to block untrustworthy sites;

Never provide confidential information on the phone unless you have called back to the institution to verify the caller.

If you think you have been victimized by a scammer, here are some suggestions:

Stop all communications immediately;

Update all accounts and passwords, including social media sites;

Notify your bank and other financial institutions immediately;

Report the scam to the Police and the Canadian Anti-Fraud Centre.

The following websites may also be of interest:

Visit the Government of Canada's website to view recent fraud alerts. You can also read their Little Black

Book of Scams to learn more about different types of scams and how to protect yourself.

Here are the top scams in Ontario and tips on how to avoid them.
