Protests are powerful mobilizing tactics/actions in movements. Disconnected from strategic plans and community organizing, protests alone do not transform oppressive conditions.

"Miss Rosa Parks's decision to stay in a forward seat was the first move in a planned boycott of the bus company and the city law, a campaign organised long before by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP)...She was not just another bus rider. She was the secretary of a city chapter of the NAACP 12 years before she stood, or sat, her ground in 1955."

Band-aid solution that does not address the root cause of the issue.
