About Models of the Mind

A selection of seminal papers by psychoanalytic thinkers will introduce participants to key concepts in psychoanalytic thinking and practice. A focus will be the psychoanalytic understanding of the birth, growth and development of the human mind.

A central objective of the course is to stimulate discussion between participants and the seminar leaders in an informal group setting.

The course is open to professionals in the mental health field as well as university graduates from other disciplines. All applicants must be physically able to attend MIP (remote participation is not available).

Additional Information

Please Note: A limited number of bursaries funded by the Australian Psychoanalytic Foundation may be available for applicants for whom otherwise participation may be difficult.

Applicants will be invited to attend an interview with the course convener to consider whether the course meets their needs.

Applications now available via the APAS website CLICK HERE

Get in touch

Email: timalexander@bigpond.com
APAS: www.psychoanalysis.asn.au