The Health Justice Commons is grounded in five core principles:

1. Justice is the best medicine. True health is rooted in justice, health is impossible in justice’s absence.

2. Health is wealth. Health is the greatest wealth because it is immeasurable. The conditions and complex inter-relationships upon which collective health depends and is enabled are incalculable.

3. No one is disposable. Every living being, human or non-human, is invaluable. In a world reliant on inter-connection, there is no “away.”

4. To harm one is to harm all. Implementing the precautionary principle now is essential for our human and planetary future.

5. Universal access. Healthcare is a human right. Access to it should not be limited for any reason, especially not due to race, class, ethnicity, gender, gender presentation, sexuality, ability, weight, appearance, religion, spiritual beliefs, or citizenship status.

For more, visit healthjusticecommons.org