Our mission is to catalyze big ideas and foster community engagement that will accelerate the transformation of Durham Public Schools to ensure success and equity for every student.

DPSF's work is centered on driving system-wide change that increases equity for all students, dismantles systemic racism and helps strengthen our public schools so all Durham students can learn, dream and thrive.

We do this by:

1. Building community-wide support for public schools
2. Incubating and investing in innovative approaches that center and build power among historically marginalized people
3. Identifying barriers to equity and advocating for policy and systems-level change that centers students' needs and dreams
4. Convening community partners, linking them to DPS and supporting coalition building to amplify the voices of school communities in decision-making
5. Streamlining and increasing charitable giving in order to distribute resources more equitably across DPS

OUR WORK IS ALIGNED UNDER THREE PRIORITIES:

Equity Through Innovation

Investing in Our People

Championing Public Education

Who We Are...

Fostering Equity Through Innovation

Our Vision:

Students, educators, families, and community leaders come together to create innovative, transformative learning environments that ensure all our students not only attend school together, but thrive together.

FY 2020/21 Highlights

1 Supported our Youth Advisory Council in launching Durham's first annual Youth Equity Summit in October. 161 students registered for the summit, including over 100 youth of color. Youth involved in the summit went on to lead and participate in Get Out the Vote work in the weeks that followed.

2 Invested in the Community Schools model being implemented at Lakewood Elementary and Club Blvd. Elementary. This model seeks to transform schools through community-driven problem solving and wraparound services for students. See story spotlight for more →

3 Supported the pilots and scaling of promising new programs and strategies, like outdoor learning, paid student internships within DPS' IT department, training teachers in personalized project-based learning and LEADurham—an online course training students and teachers in social justice and advocacy.

4 Assisted 200 DPS families with grants of $500 through the $100,000 Family Relief Fund, which helped to cover urgent needs such as emergency rent assistance, utilities, food, transportation, social-emotional well-being and mental health.

Community Schools Use Problem Solving Strategies to Better Communicate with Families

One of the many challenges exacerbated by the pandemic is the need for schools to be able to share information with families and for families to be able to talk back and be heard.

In 2019, Club Blvd. Elementary was already working on it. The previous year, the school sent out a survey and received responses from only 40 percent of their families, numbers they were looking to improve. But while school was closed, families had to play a big role each day in supporting their child's learning, making regular communication even more critical to the success of each student.

Club Blvd. is one of two "community schools" in DPS. The community schools model is a promising approach to public education that includes, among other things, a data-driven approach to problem solving. The school's communication problem-solving team set a goal that in 2020 they would be able to reach 95 percent of families regularly.

Many communications approaches were tested by Club Blvd., including phone trees and approaches to systematize texting. Ultimately, they landed on Hustle, a texting platform that allows Club to quickly reach many families via text.

Lakewood Elementary, also a community school, was engaged in a similar problem-solving process. Their strategy was to pair each family with a single point person at the school, who would call or text each week with important information. Bilingual "buddies" were recruited to assist with interpretation.

The results at both schools were amazing, with high response rates and surveyed families reporting feeling connected. Club exceeded their original goal by the fall of 2020, when they were able to consistently reach and hear back from 99 percent of their families.

Mavreen Nanton Scott, a parent at Club Blvd. and leader at the school, said the text communication has been great, "When the school needed a response from us about if we were planning on returning back to school when it reopened, they sent us a text message. I didn't have to go find the website, fill out a form, they did that for us once they got my text response. If I had a question, I could just send a text and get a text response back that day or the next."

Xavier Cason, Director of Community Schools for DPSF, says this is just one example of how community schools are using data and problem solving strategies to make change. "We're seeing that these solutions that are emerging organically in our community schools are also being adapted by other schools, scaling the impact even further. That's the beauty of it."

Investing In our People

Our Vision:

Our students are empowered to drive meaningful changes that address challenges they identify in their schools. Great educators choose to work and stay in DPS because they feel valued as professionals and are provided meaningful support to grow and innovate.

FY 2020/21 Highlights

1 Invested $470,000 directly in our school communities for student, educator and family-led initiatives. Our School Reopening Grants provided $300,000 toward reopening efforts at 39 schools, thanks to a partnership with Duke University and Duke Health’s Doing Good employee giving program. We distributed an additional $170,000 to schools through our Accelerating Digital Equity school fund.

2 Invested in growing leadership capacity for student and educator leaders through our Youth Advisory Council, Teacher Leadership Academy, and newly-launched Principal Leadership Fellowship.

3 Deepened our investment in DPS students through a merger with the DPS Scholarship Foundation and awarded $61,000 in college scholarships to 26 DPS students in our first year of administering the program.

Deepening Our Promise To Our Students & Our Community

In spring of 2021, we awarded over $61,000 in college scholarships to 26 Durham Public School students. We’re so thrilled to lift up the vibrancy of these students and support them in the next stage of their education.

Students like Meriana Gregory, a graduate of the School for Creative Studies, who is planning on getting her education license and returning to Durham to be a public school teacher.

Students like Maya Williams, a graduate of Southern School of Energy and Sustainability, who is pursuing a degree in nursing. She is passionate about shedding light on the realities that Black women face in medicine and plans to “dedicate her career to change.”

And students like Mateo Andrés Pedro Ignacio, a graduate of Jordan High School, who is beginning his higher education journey at Durham Technical Community College this fall. Mateo shared that “despite the challenges and the walls that stood in my way, I am fighting for my dreams and moving forward to achieve my goals.” We’re honored to partner with Mateo and all 26 students.

This was our first year of implementing a scholarship program, but we are building on over 40 years of scholarships awarded by the DPS Scholarship Foundation, which merged under the DPS Foundation umbrella earlier in FY 20/21.

We have big dreams for expanding access to higher education through these scholarships, and growing the Durham Promise Scholarship Awards. Durham Promise is a community-funded scholarship program that receives broad support in the form of memorial and honorarium gifts, donor gifts, and alumni contributions. It’s about furthering the promise of public education, and deepening our commitment to our community and our students.

We’re inspired by these students and their own commitment to community. As Meriana Gregory put it, “For years, I’ve had my future all mapped out from what college I wanted to attend to what classes I wanted to teach at what school once I earned my education license. Coronavirus has, of course, turned everything upside down... The one thing that hasn’t changed is that I am still determined to become a teacher for Durham Public Schools.” Meriana is headed to UNC Asheville this fall.

We wish her and all 26 awardees the best of luck, we are rooting for you!

Championing Public Education

Our Vision:

The Durham community supports and celebrates our public schools. Durham’s public schools reflect the racial and socioeconomic diversity of Durham and embody cultures and practices that equitably serve every student.

FY 2020/21 Highlights

1 Collaborated with DPS, Student U, the Office on Youth, Village of Wisdom and other community partners to create a white paper to be released in fall of 2021. The paper reflects on the experiences of our school communities through the pandemic and lifts up innovative, community-generated approaches to reimagining the public school experience in Durham.

2 Convened nearly 100 community members, non-profit and business leaders, and DPS staff to align efforts and collaborate around issues urgently facing our schools during the pandemic. Through this group, called the HOPE Network, we facilitated several working groups to make progress on different needs within the Durham community.

Harnessing Community Resources in a Time of Crisis

In July of 2020, nearly 100 community members, nonprofit and business leaders, and DPS staff came together for a series of convenings to talk about how the Durham community could help meet urgent needs in our school communities. “At that time, so many people were asking ‘how can I help?’” said Executive Director Magan Gonzales-Smith. “We wanted to further connect the Durham community in meaningful ways to our school communities.”

The convenings set out to address three areas of support: academic, social-emotional and health and safety. These conversations led to several working groups formed to make progress on different needs within the Durham community.

the Exceptional Children's Department at Durham Public Schools began meeting regularly to develop tools and connections between school district leadership and community organizations passionate about equal and accessible public education.

“The opportunity to collaborate with individuals and groups who have different lived experiences and perspectives than you—but with whom you share similar values and goals—is a gift that should never be squandered,” said Bell. “Our connections and collaborations through this network have been incredibly impactful in helping us remember that this critical disability advocacy and support work is most powerful and effective when we work together.”

The group developed a training on how to create inclusive virtual environments for students with different abilities and their work continues. Bell said although the working group emerged as a result of the crisis, they want to go beyond pandemic response. They are evolving into a parent and student support group that can respond to needs from students and families and play an advocacy role for best inclusion practices in the district and our community.

At the same time, an IT working group was also meeting regularly, led by Simon Warren, a Duke graduate student and community volunteer, and Angelique Craig-Moore, a staff member in IT Operations at Durham Public Schools. During their meetings they discussed how DPS' Help Desk was getting inundated with calls from families trying to support their students' online learning. They developed the idea to engage high school students as Help Desk interns. These paid internships would give students the opportunity for living wage work that would build their skills, while expanding the capacity of the Help Desk to respond to more requests for assistance. The pilot received funds from DPSF's Accelerating Digital Equity campaign and is now in its second iteration, with plans to continue.

Accelerating Digital Equity

Between July 2020 and June 2021, our community came together to raise more than $1.5 million in support of digital equity in our public schools. The Accelerating Digital Equity (ADE) campaign was made possible by the remarkable community response to support our public schools. This includes Duke University and Duke Health who made an early lead gift of $250,000, in addition to generous gifts from 844 other businesses, foundations, civic organizations, faith communities, and individuals.

An incredibly dedicated team of 69 campaign volunteers—led by Co-Chairs Geoff Durham, Zack Hawkins, and Laura Helms Reece—helped galvanize community support for this effort.

We worked with district, school and community partners to quickly deploy ADE funds, and as of July 1, 2021 have awarded $1,531,395 to projects advancing true digital equity through digital literacy, access to technology, teacher training, and providing a safe, supportive learning environment for our most vulnerable students to engage with online learning. DPSF will continue to provide for digital equity needs during the 2021-22 school year.

Here are a few of the projects made possible by this campaign so far:

Through partnerships with Kate's Korner, Student U, and the YMCA, ADE funds provided 300+ free spots in HOPE Learning Centers for students needing a safe, supportive learning environment during school closures. In addition to campaign contributions, Durham County and the City of Durham provided $1,358,000 for HOPE Learning Centers.

Students learning at Student U's W.G. Pearson Center, one of the HOPE Learning Centers.

The ADE School Fund provided $170,000 to 28 projects at 23 schools. Funds were used to purchase items like headphones and styluses, support events like a virtual staff retreat, virtual performances and a speaker series, and develop a peer mentoring program for Latinx students.

OUR FUNDING OF DIGITAL EQUITY CONTINUES!

"My daughter has been attending the Learning Center. I am so grateful there has been a place for students to go and receive the support and assistance they need during these challenging times... I am an essential employee, a single parent of 2 and I can not express to you how grateful I am that I do not have to leave my child at home by herself for 9 hours every day to manage remote learning on her own."

DPS PARENT

DPS' Advanced Course Equity Collaborative supported teachers in developing skills in utilizing DPS' new online learning platforms to create new advanced courses and pathways for students. This project is strengthening the academic experience of some of our most marginalized students in DPS through the pandemic and it is also creating systemic change in helping our school district more equitably prepare all students for success.

New smart classroom technology is allowing DPS to create dynamic teaching and learning spaces and extend the reach of highly-effective teachers. This includes a remote class equipped for teaching of students at locations across DPS, a medium hybrid class that allows for remote students to engage simultaneously with in-person students, and a remote professional learning teams room for teacher training.

IT Help Desk internships have added capacity to the DPS Help Desk while also giving DPS students professional training and a living-wage paid internship. DPS has plans to continue this program, which was piloted with ADE campaign funds.
