About Janis Lariviere

Jan Lariviere is a science educator with high school and university teaching experience in four states. She taught high school biology, chemistry and environmental science for 24 years, wrote textbooks, presented workshops throughout the country, and served on state and national panels and boards. Jan helped design and implement new university science and mathematics teacher preparation programs – initially UTeach at the University of Texas at Austin and later UKanTeach at the University of Kansas. UTeach has now been replicated at over 40 universities across America.
