ISAAC SEMESTER RECAP

Click here to watch the video version!

2020 was a year of challenges. ISAAC managed to face the obstacles and take advantage of them to provide the best mental health and diversity and inclusion resources to our student-athlete peers. Since the start of the pandemic, ISAAC was prepared to be the leaders of the student-athlete community and be there for every student-athlete that needed support. Based on our need for resources and education, we started meetings and events during the summer for all of those that were interested. We targeted the meaning and importance of the Black Lives Matter movement, as well as providing mental health tools to face the impact of the Coronavirus pandemic on each individual’s life. During the fall semester, we worked hard to keep the student-athlete community engaged and strong. We had biweekly meetings and offered resources to give the best support. In the same way, there was a good connection between administrators and athletes that generated a comfortable and open environment to express opinions and ask for help. Finally, there was a huge emphasis on community engagement. Although it was not easy, different opportunities for volunteering were offered to give back to the community. These three pillars: mental health, diversity and inclusion, and community engagement, were linked with USG to have a bigger effect on the student community as well as keeping the student-athletes connected with the University’s students.

Broderick Binns
Executive Director of Diversity, Equity and Inclusion

Broderick Binns was named Executive Director of Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion for UI Athletics. Binns had previously held the position of director of football player development since April, 2016. The Diversity Taskforce was created in 2018, which evolved into a permanent role. This newly created position within UI Athletics is responsible for the implementation of diversity initiatives for student-athletes, coaches, and staff; oversight of the UI Athletics Diversity Taskforce and Action Plan; ensuring that the strategic goals within the Action Plan are in alignment with campus-wide diversity policies and practices; and assisting all Iowa student athletes (with an emphasis on underrepresented students) with making a smooth transition into college life socially, academically and athletically.

Affinity Groups

In collaboration with Broderick Binns, Affinity Groups were created this Fall semester to encourage community and allyship. The iHawks group for international student-athletes focuses on the unique challenges international students face in transition to the university and the country. The Black Student-Athlete group (BSA) seeks to provide a space where black student-athletes can share their experiences and feel a sense of community where they are heard. The LGBTQ+ group focuses on providing a space where students and staff who identify in this community can speak together in a safe environment free of judgement.

The DEI Accountability Board has created the Iowa Athletics social injustice website. The purpose of this website is to ensure that all our student-athletes, coaches and staff members can share any issues or concerns that affect them while on-campus. It features a resources page and staff spotlights where individuals can look into a plethora of educational books, movies & podcasts. Most importantly, it provides a way to get in touch with the accountability board. We also included the Iowa athletic incident reporting lines and an online form for you to share your issues or concerns with confidentiality.

COVID-19 Learning:
With the switch to online classes, this also meant our tutoring sessions would be virtual as well. The Gerdin Athletic Learning Center remained open this fall, with additional safety procedures. Student-athletes and staff members completed regular testing as well as health screening before they entered our building. Student-athletes have been utilizing many of our private study rooms as a way to study socially distanced from others, as well as using them as a personal classroom for their synchronous classes. Student-athletes also could continue to meet with our Learning Specialist in person, and complete their mandatory study hours virtually. A limited in-person learning assistant program was also added halfway through the fall semester to assist those who prefer in-person learning.

Online Summer Bridge:
- Our Summer Bridge program was 100% virtual this year using ICON modules and videos submitted by various departments around campus. Students then completed corresponding assignments. The program is meant to bridge the gap from K-12 to college and caters to incoming freshmen
- Had a successful summer bridge program despite challenges. We provided programming and assistance for our students through the changes even though it looked a little different
- Partnered with MyPlaybook, and NCAA sponsored academic success program. This year 187 students completed Summer Bridge, and 175 completed MyPlaybook

This summer a Hawks to Professionals (H2P) Icon page was created as a resource for student-athletes. The page features modules on graduate and professional school, job shadowing, professional development, interview prep, job and internship search and resumes/cover letters. The H2P Icon page also contains videos featuring professionals in various fields. Click here to watch an example video from one of our professionals!

Going virtual this year has certainly brought some unexpected challenges for students pursuing career development. Despite face-to-face restrictions, I’ve been extremely excited about my internship experience as a College Financial Representative at Northwestern Mutual. Through the internship, I’ve been able to start my own personal financial planning practice focused on helping families and business professionals create a comprehensive financial plan for their future goals. Running meetings virtually has been convenient, but I do look forward to meeting my clients in person!

- Nolan Roethler, Men’s Track & Field

For many student-athletes, graduate school is becoming a popular way to gain more experience and further their education in many different fields of their choice while still having athletic eligibility remaining. My first semester in grad school has been filled great experiences, as well an abundance of knowledge that’s preparing me for my career. I’m excited about the upcoming semesters. While the balance between basketball and school has been challenging, the basketball support staff has been excellent in helping support me to alleviate the challenges. I’ve enjoyed every moment so far!

HEALTH & WELL-BEING

ISAAC Health & Well-Being Semester Recap

This fall, our Health & Well-being subcommittee has directed our focus toward mental health programming, resources, and de-stigmatization. We began working on establishing a new mental health task force across athletics which will continue to focus on mental health groups, events, discussions, and providing resources and support for other student-athletes. Additionally, Health & Well-being continued to maintain connections with campus through groups like USC, SHAC, and Active Minds. I am proud of the work we have done and am excited to continue the conversations and programming next semester!

Big Ten Mental Health Efforts:

In 2020, the Big Ten Mental Health and Wellness Cabinet was formed with two representatives from each institution. Counseling and Sport Psychologist Dr. Aubrette Kinne and Sports Medicine Team Physician Dr. Lisa Woodroffe serve on this cabinet for the University of Iowa. Dr. Kinne also serves as the chair of the Education Subcommittee.

Fresh Check Day:

- This day was dedicated to raising awareness for mental health issues as well as finding avenues to relieve stress.
- ISAAC gave an interactive presentation at their virtual booth. Each booth will cover a different topic in mental health such as body positivity, movement, diversity, and suicide prevention. ISAAC's presentation focused on student-athlete mental health.

The Calm App: This semester the Calm app was free for all student-athletes. The meditation and mindfulness application helps with sleep, anxiety and stress relief. In addition, there were virtual tutorial sessions about the app with our sport psychologists.

Hawks 4 Hawks:

- This fall Counseling and Sport Psychology staff delivered another round of Hawks for Hawks Mental Health Peer Support Training for student-athletes.
- In the fall there were 25 student-athlete participants from 14 sports. It was held via Zoom and was a great success. It was amazing to see so many student-athletes passionate about mental health support! -Dr. Aubrette Kinne, Sport Psychologist

The Hidden Opponent

This semester I have been in collaboration with The Hidden Opponent organization and ISAAC’s Health and Well-Being subcommittee to bring education and awareness to Iowa athletics about mental health issues in student-athletes. The Hidden Opponent has provided many panels throughout the semester that have encouraged talk about anxiety and body positivity in athletes. I also took a position on the University's Student Advisory Board and worked with ISAAC to create a booth at this year's virtual Fresh Check Day to talk about the benefits of moving your body and mental health. Overall, this semester has been great in starting to reduce stigma in mental health and there is a lot of potential to grow as a Hawkeye community in this regard.

The Big Ten Conference and Iowa Athletics are committed to empowering our student-athletes to use their voices to build a better future. The most fundamental way to implement change is to exercise our right to vote, which is why Big Ten Commissioner, Kevin Warren, created the Big Ten Voter Registration Initiative in conjunction with the Big Ten Conference Equality Coalition. Between May and November 2020 we released education toolkits, resources, and virtual educational sessions to inform student-athletes, coaches, and staff about the importance of civic engagement, using their voice, and the voting process.

- Alexis Sevillian (WBB) was selected to be in a commercial run on BTN talking about why voting was important to her

“I really enjoyed participating in the voting initiative. It was great to see the athletic department and the Big Ten, take such an interest in student-athlete voting and providing so many resources to our teams. I truly think it made a difference. I have voted in the past, but this opportunity helped me learn more about important steps in the voting process, and it allowed me to help teammates and peers with questions. I’m proud of my team for recognizing the importance of voting, and the way they got involved. We made our voices heard.”

“I loved providing education for the student-athletes, reaching out to our surrounding community and encouraging all Hawkeyes (staff, students and fans) to exercise their VOICE! I kept thinking about how awesome it would have been to have these opportunities when I was in school, & if someone would have been helping me learn how to educate myself on candidates on the ballot, polling places and mail-in voting. I’m proud to be a part of the Big Ten, a conference that is taking action to better our communities.”
-Roz Ellis, Assistant Field Hockey Coach

“You had to vote and I worried how they were going to feel about it if they voted. I found out that election day was the day before and they had a lot of people that voted early. I was happy that they got a chance to vote. It was really important to me to use my voice through my vote.”
-Emily Flynn, Field Hockey Student-Athlete

“Being a first time voter was super exciting and very empowering for me, as it is something I have looked forward to doing for a long time. I feel so lucky to have the right to vote so it was really important to me to use my voice through my vote.”
-Samantha Flynn, Field Hockey Student-Athlete

“Being part of the voting community at the University of Iowa has been an experience like no other. It brought me immense joy to answer questions about voting & get my fellow teammates registered to vote. This election is one that will forever be branded into my life as around the country student-athletes joined hands and went out to exercise their most valuable civil right. I look forward to explaining the 2020 election to future generations of Hawks. I would tell them how the University of Iowa was a melting pot of political ideas and stances, and that together we get out and vote.”
-Armando Bryson, Men’s Track & Field Student-Athlete

“It was a great honor to be part of this process. When I started to think about how we can be a change agent within our community. I thought right away about creating opportunities for everyone to be able to execute their constitutional right to vote. Carver-Hawkeye Arena served as a wonderful place to facilitate this. I want to thank our administration for allowing this to happen. Specifically Barbara Burke, Damian Simcox and Marcus Wilson.”
-Clive Roberts, Men’s Track & Field Associate Head Coach

LOOKING AHEAD WITH LIZ

A message from Liz Tovar, Ph.D. Interim Associate Vice President for Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion/ Associate Athletics Director for Student-Athlete Academic Services The University of Iowa

“The year 2020 has been extraordinary for our Hawkeye community including student-athletes, coaches, and staff. Covid-19, social and racial unrest, and navigating an online learning environment certainly presented challenges. However, I could not be more proud of the perseverance of our student-athletes. Last spring we achieved one of the highest grade point averages in athletic department history. This summer our student-athletes fought for social and racial justice causes. Finally, this fall we have continued our long standing tradition of community engagement even in a virtual environment. The goal for 2021 is that our community continue to stay united, to listen and learn from each other, and most importantly keep up the success in the classroom. Remember that the staff within Student-Athlete Academic Services is here to help all student-athletes. Now more than ever our community should take advantage of the exciting programming opportunities through our Hawkeye Life program as well as the academic resources within the Gerdin Athletic Learning Center. We are in this together. We are Hawkeyes!”
