Generosity lives here

Together, we can transform our region.
There it is, right underneath our logo: Generosity lives here.

It’s our tagline. It is also so much more than that.

The Quad Cities Community Foundation champions generosity in our region. No matter what you give or how you give, you can count on the celebration that is sure to follow.

When we receive a stack of one-dollar bills and a hand-written note from a young girl who gave her allowance to the Quad Cities Disaster Recovery Fund, we lift up the kindness. When a young couple calls to inquire how they can start a scholarship to honor a neighbor who passed, we celebrate the legacy. When a widow stops into the office, not sure how we can help but trusting that we can—we honor her generous resolve.

The Quad Cities Community Foundation exists to help generous people be generous toward the community they love. You’ll see the impact all across the region—in the faces of people who are both committed and driven to fostering a community that is built on love, inclusion, respect, and yes, generosity.

Building a more vibrant, equitable, and inclusive Quad Cities doesn’t happen overnight—it takes staying power. We’re grateful for your generosity and your trust so that we can take on those big goals together.

Kent Pilcher
Board chairperson
President / Estes Construction
What we do

We hear the question time and again: “What exactly is it that you do?” The short answer is: A lot. The complicated answer is: Grow endowment funds, start scholarships, make grants... the list goes on and on. The best answer is: We champion generosity in the Quad Cities (and beyond!).

The Quad Cities Community Foundation was founded in 1964 by community members, for community members. We help people who love their community act on their philanthropy in simple yet powerful ways. And yes, there are all sorts of giving tools that help us do that, like donor advised funds and estate planning provisions (more on both of those—and more—at right). There are also tax incentives to help you make the most of every gift so you can have an even bigger impact.

The Community Foundation works with you to give charitably during your lifetime and after, by helping you explore what generosity means to you and by helping you practice becoming an effective, impactful giver. We partner with you to give—through gifts and grants of all sizes—to agencies meeting basic human needs, nonprofits working toward equitable solutions to systemic problems, and arts organizations enhancing quality of life. We offer scholarships to students with big dreams for the future and lead youth programs that foster a new generation of philanthropists even before they have a driver’s license.

And, thanks to donors who give to Community Impact Funds, we address community needs and support promising opportunities that strengthen the Quad Cities region for all who live here.

Community Impact Fund
Giving to the Community Impact Fund is a way to support needs and opportunities in the Quad Cities region as they arise. You can give $5 or $5 million—this is where we all join together to make a bigger difference than any one of us can on our own.

Designated endowment funds
Designated endowment funds are a way to support your favorite charities forever.

Endowed field of interest funds
Field of interest funds are a way to support your favorite causes, like the arts or the environment.

Donor advised funds
Donor advised funds are a way to make tax-deductible gifts now, then grant to nonprofits on your timetable.

Nonprofit endowment and reserve funds
Nonprofits can both build permanent, reliable financial support and house expendable assets like nonprofit reserve funds.

Endowed scholarship funds
Endowed scholarship funds are a way to make education accessible to students.

Geographic Affiliate and Community funds
We work with the region’s communities and counties to establish gifts and funds that keep philanthropic dollars local.

Disaster funds
In times of disaster and trial, our community rallies together through the Quad Cities Disaster Recovery Fund to help our neighbors in need.

Ways to give through the Community Foundation
Read more about how to give through the Community Foundation on pages 8 and 9.

The Putnam Museum offers educational programs for young students thanks, in part, to support from Community Foundation donors.
If there was a story to be told, John Willard was there.

For decades, as local residents sipped their early morning coffee and flipped through the daily news in the Quad-City Times, there he was—with his welcoming smile and warm eyes. He always had something to say.

A few years ago, John spent the morning with us in our office on Middle Road in Bettendorf. He told us that he had just come from his regular walk through VanderVeer Park. “We always savor the beauty,” he said.

Savoring the beauty was something John and his wife Carol did throughout their life. They also spread goodness throughout the Quad Cities—in the stories John told while he and Carol were alive and now, through a generous estate gift of about $3 million placed in the trusted hands of the Quad Cities Community Foundation.

“It’s clear that John and Carol had a heart for their community,” says Sue Hafkemeyer, president and CEO. “They weren’t sure where or how to leave their legacy, but they knew they wanted to be generous.”

And generous they were, leaving the majority of their estate to the Community Foundation. Their gift means that John and Carol will keep giving to community assets like VanderVeer Park and the Davenport Public Library, nonprofits like the Humane Society of Scott County and Genesis Health Services Foundation, their alma maters Aurora University and the University of Illinois, their church Grace Lutheran Church, and community funds like the Quad Cities Community Impact Fund, among others.

“We are fortunate to have you as a resource so we can always support charitable causes important to us,” John said to us. “It is comforting to know that we have the expertise available that ensures our estate will be carefully managed. We have no children. We have few heirs. We can’t think of a better legacy than one that is possible through the Community Foundation.”

How Carol and John left their legacy

1. They decided they wanted to be generous and asked a friend how they share their philanthropy.
2. John called the Community Foundation and spoke with our team about how they could plan their estate to support specific nonprofits they loved and their community.
3. We walked the couple through the process alongside their attorney and committed to carrying out their legacy in the way they wanted.
4. As directed by their plan, Carol and John’s estate established an endowment fund after they both passed away.
5. Now, Carol and John’s legacy continues each year through grants to the nonprofits they designated.
There are many ways to give

Below are just a few examples of how philanthropic people like you have given back through the Community Foundation. You can read their full stories and more online at www.QCCommunityFoundation.org.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Meet generous givers</th>
<th>Generous givers want to support their community</th>
<th>Generous givers meet the Community Foundation</th>
<th>The result</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Gift and estate planning</td>
<td>Deb and Corey are community-minded, volunteering with the fire department. Deb also volunteers at Humility Homes and Services, and Corey is a retired police officer and worked at Alternatives.</td>
<td>Following the loss of a few friends, Deb and Corey realized it was time to update their will—and do more with their estate.</td>
<td>Their attorney introduced them to the Community Foundation, and we were able to help them plan their charitable estate giving and establish an endowed fund to support their giving while they are alive.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Youth and family philanthropy</td>
<td>As a high school student, Kimberly joined our Teens for Tomorrow program. (Yes, even teenagers are philanthropists!)</td>
<td>Her parents, Lynn and Dennis, learned about the Community Foundation because of their daughter’s experience. They were impressed, so they started their own family giving fund.</td>
<td>Once Kimberly introduced us, the entire family has worked with our staff to identify the ways they want to give... as a family.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Scholarships</td>
<td>Ray and Mike are married, have three children, and for years shared Sunday dinners with their neighbor Fran.</td>
<td>Fran was a life-long Quad Citizen who loved literature, believed in equal rights, and made the best applesauce in the world.</td>
<td>When Fran passed away, Ray and Mike established a scholarship to memorialize her.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Supporting causes</td>
<td>Raj came to the Midwest from India and with his wife, Mari, has been active in the community for decades.</td>
<td>They wanted to support three causes important to them: education, ending homelessness, and hospice care.</td>
<td>Raj and Mari started an endowed fund in their family’s name and asked us to help make decisions on the best use of their dollars every year.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Generous givers</td>
<td>Generous givers want to support their community</td>
<td>Generous givers meet the Community Foundation</td>
<td>The result</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Community Foundation helps them support causes they care about</td>
<td>We’re helping them to give to causes they care about: local beautification projects, animals, and yes, the fire department.</td>
<td>“My mom would be so honored and humbled. She loved learning and the trappings of education,” says Fran’s son Brendan.</td>
<td>“I’m just so happy to be involved with this—to be able to do this.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The result</td>
<td>“I always thought the Community Foundation was for rich people,” Corey says. “Come to find out, it doesn’t take a lot to give.”</td>
<td>“We ended up making that gift because we knew that they would grant those dollars out where they were most needed. We were confident of that.”</td>
<td>“My mom would be so honored and humbled. She loved learning and the trappings of education,” says Fran’s son Brendan.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
We often say, “Generosity lives here.” It also grows here—literally.

The Quad Cities Community Foundation stays on the pulse of the most pressing needs and promising opportunities of our bi-state region thanks to our partnerships with area nonprofits—and the Quad Citizens who lead them. Ryan Wille is one of those people. As executive director of the Quad City Botanical Center in Rock Island, Ryan is growing the organization’s endowment so that the flora and fauna—and the educational programs the Center offers—are around forever.

“The gifts and grants we have been given—thanks to donors of the Community Foundation—make our mission possible, pure and simple,” Ryan says. “We are fortunate enough to have community members leave us legacy gifts through their estate, and whenever possible, we like to take a percentage of those gifts and place them in our endowment. We will be here for the long haul, no matter the challenges that come our way. The fund we started at the Community Foundation will be part of helping to ensure that.”

In addition to the endowed fund the Botanical Center started, it also benefits from operational support from the Amy Helpenstell Foundation Fund at the Community Foundation. Before she passed away, Amy Helpenstell was a member of the board of directors at the Botanical Center. “The support we’ve received through Amy’s legacy has allowed us to grow our children’s garden, invest in technology, and expand opportunities for young people in particular,” says Ryan.

Want to know how a nonprofit you love can be supported by an endowed fund? It’s easy to get started. Just call us to learn more.
"The Quad Cities Community Foundation doesn’t just provide funding support," Program Executive Jeff Cornelius at Two Rivers YMCA says. “They provide leadership—at the table and around the community.”

One in five kids in the Quad Cities is food insecure—which has a ripple effect on a child’s ability to study, develop, and grow. “This was an issue we had to tackle, and we couldn’t do it without community partners,” Jeff says.

Two Rivers YMCA came together with the Martin Luther King Jr. Community Center and the Boys and Girls Clubs of the Mississippi Valley with a goal of dramatically reducing hunger and increasing health and well-being in the Quad Cities. Yes, it would take funding to make it happen—and collaborative community leadership to transform the lives of the kids and families they serve.

“The Community Foundation was one of the first to step up and say, ‘We can be part of the solution.’ Their leadership and expertise guided us in developing processes that have ensured this program has been successful.”

Today, the Nourish Program provides between 1,500 and 2,100 meals per day (yes, per day!) to children in Rock Island County. “It’s a matter of a rising tide lifting all boats,” Jeff adds. “We can only succeed when we all come together.”

---

Tackling challenges

We’re more than a grantmaker

Knowledge sharing

We offer opportunities for donors, community members, and nonprofits to share knowledge and expertise that strengthens the nonprofit sector, as well as the public and private sector.

Disaster recovery

Whether during a historic flood or a global pandemic, our team participates in response and recovery efforts, from activating the Quad Cities Disaster Recovery Fund to guiding long-term recovery plans in coordination with Disaster Ready Quad Cities.

Regional vision

We believe a cool, creative, connected, and prosperous Quad Cities can transform our bi-state region. Our team is proud to lead initiatives within the Q2030 Regional Vision that move our community forward.

Youth philanthropy

We know that anyone can be a philanthropist. We proudly partner with area teenagers to inspire generosity, develop a grant program, and learn about community issues through our Teens for Tomorrow program.
Fifteen-year-old me would be so proud of who I’ve become and how far this community has come. The Community Foundation keeps showing how much they value not only my voice but the voice of the younger generations.

The Quad Cities Community Foundation is here because generous community members stepped up to give of themselves, and their treasure, in 1964.

We commit to always be here because of the people who have followed in their footsteps—people like you who have the heart to strengthen the Quad Cities region and who act on that desire with generosity.

No matter who you are, where you’re from, or what you have to give, you are welcome here.

Discover what you can make possible
www.QCCommunityFoundation.org
(563) 326-2840

Esmeralda Kizer
Board member & Teens for Tomorrow alumna
General Engineer / Rock Island Arsenal
The Community Foundation has been a longstanding supporter of our efforts. Now, they’re taking a leadership role, and with their support, we’ll be able to engage, excite, and motivate other community stakeholders to advance our region’s vision for safe, decent, and affordable housing. This grant is transformational in that it sends a message out to the rest of the community that this is a vision worth investing in.”

Leslie Kilgannon
Director / Quad Cities Housing Council