Until Colorado’s broad range of education advocates meaningfully engage in a co-creation process, education initiatives and policies will not fully meet the needs of the students, families, and communities they intend to impact, nor will we see our educational system as a whole evolve.

A strong, interconnected ecosystem of educational advocates and partners is essential to ensuring all students can access high quality education options. Climb Higher connects the dots between partners, building trust and maximizing impact.

Looking Forward

If Climb Higher Colorado is successful at strengthening the state’s education ecosystem, a broad range of partners will:

1. Work together in fundamentally different ways in order to...

   !Diagram

2. Build shared understanding and buy-in to the practices that most significantly impact chronically underserved students and families, so that we can...

   !Diagram

3. Collectively tackle issues rooted in student and community needs...

   !Diagram

   Annual meeting to set a collective, proactive agenda for the year ahead

   !Calendar

   Monthly coalition meetings to build trust and coordinate on issues

   !Clock

   Quarterly cross-organization projects and trainings to address policy and organizational challenges

   !Tools