If Maria has presented documents establishing that she is eligible to vote, the DMV forwards her information to the Board of Elections.

Maria just moved to New York and needs to get a New York driver’s license. She goes to the New York Department of Motor Vehicles and completes the paperwork to get a driver’s license.

In four easy steps, Maria’s voting eligibility is verified and she is registered to vote at her new address.

1. If Maria has presented documents establishing that she is eligible to vote, the DMV forwards her information to the Board of Elections.

2. The Board of Elections processes the information and sends a letter to Maria’s apartment.

3. Maria can return an enclosed postcard to:
   - Add her party affiliation
   - Fix any incorrect information
   - Choose to decline registration

   If she does not decline registration, Maria is registered to vote in the next election.

4. If she does not decline registration, Maria is registered to vote in the next election.
