Bill targets transparency for mental hospitals

By Alex Stuckey

Patients have a right to know if a hospital is safe when choosing where to receive care, Rep. Stephanie Klick said — and that means the information process needs to be more transparent.

Klick, R-Fort Worth, presented her bill, HB 1082, Wednesday before the House Committee on Public Health. It would require the Texas Health and Human Services Commission to post enforcement actions for each mental hospital online, including the code in question and a statement of the hospital’s alleged violation — including the code in question and a statement of the hospital’s alleged violation.

City kicks scooters off busy sidewalks

Houston has certified scooter rentals along city sidewalks, and秸秆 riders of the two-wheelers can hop up to the street.

City Council on Wednesday approved changes to Houston’s codes outlawing any motorized activity impeding public sidewalks or blocking a city-controlled public thoroughfare. The new codes aim at eliminating businesses that use temporary trailers and pull-out sidewalk parking lots to rent scooters. The businesses have grown in popularity, but critics complain they block sidewalks and encourage novice riders to rocket along crowded sidewalks.

Chairman Sylvester Turner said the plan was curbing a fun family activity at a time when more people are venturing outdoors.

You would think they would want people to spend more time in public parks, not law,” said Rachel Singley, 31, as she watched her two young sons dart around downtown Houston on scooters earlier this month.
