1. Context and Considerations

   Context

A. Industry Engagement and Dual Customer Focus of the Workforce System

The workforce system in California has a “dual customer” focus and serves both employers and workers. The state’s strategic workforce plan, developed by the CWDB and its planning partners, highlights this dual focus in its vision statement which centers on “the establishment and growth of a High Road workforce system . . . [that is] focused on meaningful industry engagement and placement of Californians in quality jobs that provide economic security.” The task of the CWDB, from this perspective, is to “develop a workforce system that enables economic growth and shared prosperity for employers and employees, especially those with barriers to employment, by investing in industry partnerships, job quality, and meaningful skills attainment rather than low wages, contingent employment, and minimal benefits.”

Under the California Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act the CWDB is statutorily required to identify industry sectors and industry clusters that have a competitive economic advantage and demonstrated economic importance to the state and its regional economies.

The CWDB is also required, under state statute, to develop, support, and sustain regional alliances of employers and workforce and education professionals who are working to improve the educational pipeline, establish well-articulated career pathways, provide industry-recognized credentials, certificates, and recognized postsecondary credentials, and address the career advancement needs of current and future workers in competitive and emergent industry sectors and clusters.

The CWDB has pursued the policy vision of the state plan and over the past several years has worked to fulfill its obligations with regard to workers and employers in three ways:

- by facilitating and investing grant money in local and regional partnerships between educational institutions, job training providers, Local Workforce Development Boards and employers in strategic industry sectors
- by making direct investments in high road training partnerships that bring workers and employers together to collectively address the workforce needs of strategic industry sectors
- by providing grant funds to mission-driven community based organizations, Local Workforce Development Boards, and their partners, to provide workforce services and job training opportunities to individuals with barriers to employment
B. Legislative Investments in Workforce Grant Programs

In recent years the Legislature has augmented available federal funds for workforce services in the state by making state funds available to the CWDB to design, implement, and administer a variety of workforce grant initiatives serving both jobseekers and employers. Recent investments include the following:

- In 2017 the Legislature provided $25 million in funding over five years to the California Workforce Development Board to fund construction pre-apprenticeship programs with the goal of preparing individuals for apprenticeship opportunities created by public investments in infrastructure.

- In 2017 the Legislature created and in 2018 funded the Breaking Barriers to Employment grant initiative, appropriating $15 million for workforce services, program implementation, and program evaluation. Workforce services are provided through innovative partnerships between mission-driven community based organizations (CBOs) and Local Workforce Development Boards (LWDBs). To date 26 partnerships between CBOs and LWDBs have been funded.

- In 2018 the Legislature created and funded the Prison to Employment (P2E) grant initiative, providing approximately $37 million over three years to organize and regionally align workforce programs and services for formerly incarcerated and justice involved individuals. To date, CWDB has awarded 28 grants to 14 regional partnerships to carry out the objectives of the initiative.

- In 2019 the Legislature provided $150 million over five years to the CWDB to fund High Road Training Partnerships and High Road Construction Career grants to help stand up the workforce needed to transition to a carbon neutral economy. Funds available for this program were later reduced when Greenhouse Gas Reduction Fund (GGRF) revenues fell short. Nevertheless the CWDB has awarded approximately $26.5 million in grants, including 22 High Road Training Partnership grants, and 8 High Road Construction Career grants to facilitate workforce development relevant to the ongoing shift to a clean energy economy. Grants currently fund industry partnerships in the transportation, energy, health care, water, and utilities sectors, among others.

- In the 2021 January budget the Governor also proposed providing another $25 million in General Fund monies to the CWDB to further expand its High Road Training Partnership grant program by building partnerships in the following industries: health care, logistics, forestry, and information technology, among others.

Considerations

This bill would extend the Legislature and Governor’s recent efforts to build a more robust workforce system in the state by creating a new grant program that would support career advancement prospects for creative workers. The proposed new grant initiative is designed to serve both employers and creative workers in the arts and entertainment industry, an industry sector of strategic importance to the state. The proposed program is designed to function administratively at the state level as a partnership between the CWDB and the CAC, though it would be operationalized and implemented at the local and regional level by local government entities, cultural arts agencies, community nonprofit organizations, as well as other organizations operating a program consistent with the objectives of the grant program.

The division of labor envisioned in this proposal is similar to the division of labor that exists in the state workforce system where the state sets policy for workforce programs (consistent with applicable federal and state law) while local entities, including Local Workforce Development Boards (and their vendors), local educational institutions, county human services programs, and community based organizations provide training and deliver services.

Should this bill pass out of committee the author may wish to do the following:

- Consider including language that ensures that grant funds be distributed in a manner that achieves geographic equity.

2. Author’s Statement

According to the author, “California’s economic and civic recovery will depend on rapidly returning as many people as possible to work. California’s $650 billion creative economy is the largest in the world but COVID-19 has brought much of it to a standstill. According to a report by the Public Policy Institute of California, of 11,000 creative workers surveyed, over 96% had lost revenue or employment because of the pandemic. Creative industries are integral to the recovery, rebuilding, and healing of California. Creative workers and projects heal communities, drive social-emotional learning, improve cultural competency and cohesion, address trauma, and inspire new thinking in communities with unmet needs. If California is to retain its premier position in arts and culture, and realize the social, cultural, and economic benefits of the creative industries there must be greater opportunities for creative employment and training across the state. The California Creative Workforce Development Act of 2021 would establish programs to employ creative workers in their community, and to provide training and support to new creative workers.”

3. Proponent Arguments

According to California Arts Advocates, the sponsor of the bill, “As the statewide advocacy organization for the arts, culture and creative industries in California, we are deeply concerned that unless immediate measures are taken to support what was one of California’s leading industries before the pandemic, California could face a cultural depression for years to come. In fact, a recent McKinsey and Company report states that in a muted recovery, they estimate that it will take until 2025 for the arts, entertainment, and recreation sectors to recover to pre-COVID 19 sector GDP.

The Impact

- 59% of creative workers were unemployed due to the shutdown.
- 69% of businesses including nonprofits severely impacted by COVID 19.
- Estimated 43.1 Billion revenue loss for creative industries in 2020.
Industry Facts, pre COVID

- $230.3 Billion generated annually by the Creative Industries.
- Represents 8.2% of the GSP for the state . . .
- Employs over 750,000 workers.

SB 628 represents an innovate solution to help build back the arts and creative industries workforce by offering jobs creation opportunities for the recently unemployed and workforce development for a new pipeline of creative workers. Innovation is crucial to competition, and creativity is integral to innovation. According to 2019 LinkedIn behavioral data, creativity is the most in-demand soft skill in short supply. Additionally, a recent McKinsey study predicts that as automation transforms the skills companies need, demand for creativity will rise sharply by 2030. The training and development prescribed by SB 628 would serve people who are at the beginning of their careers in the creative arts . . .

5. Recent and Prior Legislation:

SB 866 (Senate Budget Committee, Chapter 53, Statutes of 2018): required the California Workforce Development Board (CWDB) to administer the Prison to Employment (P2E) program and award grants for the development of regional partnerships and regional plans to provide and coordinate the necessary workforce, education, supportive, and related services that formerly incarcerated and other justice-involved individuals need to secure and retain employment.

AB 1111 (Eduardo Garcia, Chapter 824, Statutes of 2017): established the Breaking Barriers to Employment Initiative grant program at the CWDB to provide individuals with barriers to employment with services to aid them in workforce preparation, training and education.

AB 398 (Eduardo Garcia, Chapter 135, Statutes of 2017) directed the CWDB to assess the need for increased education, job training, and workforce development resources to help workers and communities transition to a low carbon economy. The required legislative report was provided to the Legislature in the fall of 2020.

SB 342 (Jackson, Chapter 507, Statutes of 2015): required the California Workforce Development Board (CWDB) to assist the Governor in helping individuals with barriers to employment, including low-skill, low-wage workers, the long-term unemployed, and members of single-parent households, achieve economic security and upward mobility by implementing policies that encourage the attainment of marketable skills relevant to current labor market trends. The legislation also defined “earn and learn” job training opportunities.
