Leadership is a Series of Negotiations

How Leaders Can Effectively Negotiate Anything from Big Deals to Workplace Drama

More than ever, leaders must know how to effectively negotiate in order to be successful. When you think about it, much of a professional’s day is spent negotiating: hammering out the terms of a deal, controlling costs, solving clients’ problems, and working with other departments. For some, negotiation can look like asking for additional headcount, mediating workplace drama, and negotiating change in the organization. For you, negotiation may mean influencing key decision makers and being recognized for the value you provide. Leadership is a constant negotiation.

In this presentation, Linda shows you how to become a better negotiator and leader through research-backed tactics and proven strategies that work in real life. From her experience in the courtroom and the boardroom, Linda inspires others to look at negotiations as a conversation rather than a confrontation. She equips high-performing leaders with the tools they need to help attract support for their ideas.

After attending, participants leave with strategies to:

- Harness the power of positive influence, persuasion and negotiation;
- Negotiate for the push and pull for resources while building win-win-win partnerships with stakeholders;
- Avoid over-committing and unnecessary compromise;
- Spot and identify others’ negotiation (DEAL) styles and effectively communicate to create desired, durable outcomes;
- Develop meaningful relationships with key people to attract support for ideas; and
- Reach winning results with integrity and confidence.

IDEAL AUDIENCE: For anyone who leads people, including project leaders, mid-level managers, and senior executives. Specific audiences have included: sales teams; governmental departments; professionals such as lawyers, doctors, financial advisors, and accountants; insurance and tech companies; women's groups; associations; and more.
