WHY: Waddell & Reed, through its relationship with production studio Legendary Pictures, became aware of the pending release of “42,” the story of Jackie Robinson, whose career began with the Kansas City Monarchs of the Negro Leagues in 1945, before he was discovered by Brooklyn Dodger’s GM Branch Rickey. Robinson played with the Monarchs on the old Muehlebach Field, the predecessor to Municipal Stadium, at 22nd and Brooklyn.

Waddell & Reed Financial, Inc., including Executive Vice President Tom Butch, who also is chairman of the board of the Kansas City Sports Commission, recognized the release of this film as an opportunity to support the Negro Leagues Baseball Museum in Kansas City and the Kansas City Sports Commission through a special advance screening. AMC Theatres, another Kansas City-based entity, is serving as host and venue sponsor, donating the entire theater space, theater team, concessions and spirits for the event.

Bob Kendrick, president of the Negro Leagues Baseball Museum, who is well-versed in Kansas City Monarchs and Robinson’s history, agreed that Kansas City makes a fitting location for an advance screening, noting that Robinson’s step into Major League Baseball marked the unofficial beginning of the civil rights movement in this country. The Kansas City Monarchs ultimately sent more players to MLB than any other Negro League franchise.

Hero is a word we hear often in sports, but heroism is not always about achievements on the field of play. “42” tells the story of two men—the great Jackie Robinson and legendary Brooklyn Dodgers GM Branch Rickey—whose brave stand against prejudice forever changed the world by changing the game of baseball. In 1946, Branch Rickey (Harrison Ford) put himself at the forefront of history when he signed Jackie Robinson (Chadwick Boseman) to the team, breaking Major League Baseball’s infamous color line. But the deal also put both Robinson and Rickey in the firing line of the public, the press and even other players. Facing unabashed racism from every side, Robinson was forced to demonstrate tremendous courage and restraint by not reacting in kind, knowing that any incident could destroy his and Rickey’s hopes.

Instead, Number 42 let his talent on the field do the talking—ultimately winning over fans and his teammates, silencing his critics, and paving the way for others to follow. In 1997, Major League Baseball retired the number 42 for all teams, making it the first number in sports to be universally retired. The only exception is April 15th—Jackie Robinson Day—commemorating the date of his first game as a Brooklyn Dodger. On that day, players from every team proudly wear Number 42 to honor the man who altered the course of history.

Rounding out the main cast of “42” are: Nicole Beharie (“Shame”) as Rachel Isum, who would become Robinson’s wife; Christopher Meloni as Leo Durocher; Andre Holland as Wendell Smith; Lucas Black as Pee Wee Reese; Hamish Linklater as Ralph Branca; Ryan Merriman as Dixie Walker; and T.R. Knight as Harold Parrott. The film is produced by Thomas Tull, with Dick Cook, Jon Jashni, and Jason Clark serving as executive producers, and Darryl Pryor and Jillian Zaks co-producing.

Warner Bros. Pictures and Legendary Pictures present, a Legendary Pictures Production, a Brian Helgeland film, “42.” Slated for release April 12, 2013, the film will open in time to commemorate the 66th anniversary of Jackie Robinson Day - April 15, the date of his first game as a Brooklyn Dodger.
