Seeking a Restoration Ecologist

San Diego Canyonlands (SDCL) is a growing nonprofit dedicated to restoring and preserving San Diego County’s wonderful canyons and creeks. SDCL is seeking a Restoration Ecologist to support SDCL programs primarily throughout San Diego County. The Restoration Ecologist (RE) will be the restoration program manager responsible for vegetation assessment & community classification, habitat restoration planning & implementation, and management of our restoration field team. The RE conducts required project monitoring and reporting, and supports community organizing and canyon-event activities consistent with SDCL’s objectives and goals. Job duties include canyon event facilitation, trail building, grant writing, and supervision of staff, interns, and volunteers. The RE will coordinate with the Executive Director to implement stewardship and restoration plans produced through SDCL’s Canyon Enhancement Planning program.

Skill Sets and Experience:
- Bachelor’s degree in a closely related field or relevant experience to understand San Diego’s local floral and faunal relationships is required.
- Sufficient local field experience in identification of flora or fauna, including endangered species status and trends, experience in habitat evaluation, and familiarity with suitable mitigation methods including revegetation design and implementation is required.
- Experience with Wetland Delineation is required.
- Qualified Herbicide Application License (QAL) and state certified herbicide applicator is preferred.
- Focused species survey capabilities (such as California Gnatcatcher) meeting agency qualifications/certifications and regulatory protocol requirements; and possess or obtains appropriate permits is preferred.
- Experience with GIS Mapping and gathering and mapping conditions data in the field including vegetation communities etc. is preferred.
