Organizational Summary:

The Surveillance Technology Oversight Project (“S.T.O.P.”) is a 501(c)(3), non-profit advocacy organization hosted by the Urban Justice Center. Launched in 2019, S.T.O.P. litigates and advocates for privacy, working to abolish local governments’ systems of mass surveillance. Our work highlights the discriminatory impact of surveillance on Muslim Americans, immigrants, the LGBTQ+ community, indigenous peoples, and communities of color, particularly the unique trauma of anti-Black policing.

S.T.O.P. quickly became an internationally recognized force for privacy and civil rights, featured in leading news outlets around the world. We fight surveillance in court, legislate against invasive tools, and work towards a better, more inclusive society. Amid COVID-19’s unprecedented privacy threats, S.T.O.P.’s has taken on even greater importance, highlighting the dangers of unproven contact tracing technologies.

S.T.O.P. will transform New York from one of the worst surveillance states in America into one of the most private protective. We organized a coalition of more than 100 civil rights and community-based organizations to enact the Public Oversight of Surveillance Technology (“POST”) Act, the first New York surveillance reform in a generation. Under the POST Act, the NYPD must disclose every spy tool it uses, as well as how information is shared with federal officials. S.T.O.P. helped introduce the first bill in the country to ban police use of “geofence warrants” and commercial geolocation databases, highlighting how these tools could be used to monitor attendance at everything from protests to houses of worship.

S.T.O.P. sued city and state agencies for a range of records, including transit officials’ use of facial recognition and the tools the NYPD uses to break into New Yorker’s cellphones. We won in court, forcing agencies to disclose previously hidden documents. Our class action cases challenge everything from discriminatory police practices to surveillance vendors’ wholesale invasion of New Yorkers’ privacy.

S.T.O.P. has published research papers on topics ranging from warrantless cellphone seizures, to congestion pricing, to the Apple / Google partnership on Bluetooth-based COVID-19 tracking systems. We have authored dozens of whitepapers and research posts and more than 60 op-eds in just the past year and a half. S.T.O.P.’s community training efforts bring us together with grassroots partners to provide targeted trainings, focusing on the unique privacy concerns of the communities they serve.

S.T.O.P. is headed by Albert Fox Cahn, a public interest lawyer, technologist, writer, and interfaith advocate. In addition to his work at S.T.O.P., Mr. Cahn is a fellow at the Engelberg Center on Innovation Law & Policy at N.Y.U. School of Law and serves on the New York Immigration Coalition’s Immigrant Leaders Council, the New York Immigrant Freedom Fund’s Advisory Council, and as an editorial board member for the Anthem Ethics of Personal Data Collection.

S.T.O.P.’s Technology Director Liz O’Sullivan has spent ten years in tech. She is co-founder and vice president of commercial operations at an AI explainability and bias monitoring startup called Arthur AI.

S.T.O.P. is overseen by a Board of Directors and Community Advisory Board (“CAB”). The CAB includes advocates, activists, attorneys, and technologists from communities historically targeted by surveillance.
