I've been listening to the artistry of Kenny Burrell ever since the early 60's. My first guitar teacher, Dr. James F. Condell (Moorhead, MN), gave me an equal exposure to the worlds of classical and jazz by letting me plunder his valuable collection of recordings for over a decade. He had a lot of jazz guitar albums which I transferred to tape. I always seemed to gravitate toward Kenny's recordings because of his distinct sound and musical language. His fluent phrasing, endless stream of ideas and the gorgeous tone of his instrument set the standard of jazz guitar for me.

I've been fortunate to have renewed my friendship over the last several years with Dr. Condell and his wife Dr. Yvonne Condell and to discover that they had become personal friends of Kenny. James and Kenny share an intense interest in the music of Duke Ellington which has caused their paths to intersect many times. When James retired from Moorhead State's psychology department in 1992 Kenny honored the occasion by giving a rare solo concert. During a dinner the night before I asked Kenny one question in particular that I've thought about quite often. It was concerning that special sound he gets. Kenny has used a Gibson Super 400 (hollow body) guitar and Fender Twin Reverb amp for many years and I always considered his amplifier to be essential in giving that fullness and depth to his signature sound. I was surprised to hear him say that he's always striving to get a pure acoustic tone and that he really dislikes amplifiers because they change the sound of the instrument and they're not very reliable. He also said that technique is just a means to attaining his sound. Too many players in recent years have just focused on technique and there's no beauty to the sound. The sound a player gets is the result of a bigger "inner feeling." He also likes to perform fingerstyle on nylon and steel-string acoustic guitars which gives a pleasant contrast. The great thing about playing these varied instruments is that it expands a player's interests into all different styles.

Kenny Burrell, 65, grew up in Detroit in the 1940s and began playing guitar at age 13. He was initially inspired by Charlie Christian's single-line melodic work and then by Oscar Moore (Nat King Cole Trio) who pioneered chordal harmony. His maiden voyage occurred at age 20 when he was asked to play with the legendary Dizzy BURRELL, to page 6

On Saturday, December 7, 8:00 p.m., local favorites Tim Sparks and Pat Donohue will be joined by Muriel Anderson to present an "All-Star Guitar Night" of fingerstyle guitar music at the Brady Center Auditorium at the University of St. Thomas.

Muriel Anderson is widely recognized as the premier woman fingerstyle guitarist today. Protege of both Country giant Chet Atkins and classical virtuoso Christopher Parkening, she won the National Fingerpicking Guitar Championship in 1989. Anderson writes for Hal Leonard Publications and is a columnist for Fingerstyle Guitar magazine.

Widely regarded as one of the most versatile concert guitarists in the United States, Tim Sparks repertoire ranges from classic jazz to classical, Portuguese Fado to Brazilian Bossa Nova. For over a decade, as a performer, composer and arranger he has been an important player in the Twin Cities music scene. He has toured Europe with a group of international solo acoustic guitarists and was a winner at the 1993 National Fingerstyle Guitar Championship. Mr. Sparks has released two CD's on Acoustic Music Records.

Pat Donohue's talents are displayed weekly in his appearances on "A Prairie Home Companion" with Garrison Keillor, where his guitar playing, writing and singing are featured regularly. A former National Fingerpicking Guitar Champion, Donohue's style blends blues and folk in a dazzling display of guitar artistry. Equally compelling are his original songs, which have been recorded by Chet Atkins, Suzy Bogguss, Loose Ties and other national performers. His most recent recording, "Big Blind Bluesy," is a collection of classic country blues and Donohue originals in the blues tradition.

Tickets are $10 general admission and $8 for guitar society members, students, and seniors and may be purchased in advance at the Podium in Minneapolis or Cadenza Music in St. Paul or call the Minnesota Guitar Society at 418-6219 to reserve tickets.
I began to study the guitar which was presented to me by my brother-in-law (the husband of my oldest sister) at the age of 16. They both are now in the nursing home where I played my first concert in America.

My first guitar teacher was Ivan Belov, I studied with him in a musical institute in Kiev for about a half a year. Then, following his advice, I joined the ensemble of guitar players lead by Yar Puhalsky of the Kiev Conservatory.

Then I studied under Ludmila Kolesnikova, a conservatory student of Puhalsky at that time. She became my "Musical Godmother." When I was 20, I was enlisted in the army, and was in service for three-and-a-half years. I played as a soloist, an accompanist, and as a part of ensemble. In spite of the hard life of the army, I taught myself complex repertory.

After finishing my service, I was invited to study guitar under Konstantin Smaga, the first teacher of Ludmila Kolesnikova. I studied with him for about 1 year. Smaga had a big influence on me. He was a Professional (with a capital letter), but had a dramatic personal life, which drove him to alcohol. Smaga, as well as Puhalsky, graduated from the Kiev Conservatory under Professor Mark Gelis. Then I was admitted to the Leningrad Musical College named after Musorgsky, from which I graduated in 1972.

Gelis, who personified the old Russian musical culture, taught in conservatory many musical instruments: piano, Russian accordion, domra, balalaika, guitar, bandura, cymbals. At different times, Gelis was taught by Mina Buf (she was a student of Anton Rubenstein), Blumenfeld, Simon Barer, Peter Bechlemishev (he was a student of Buzoni).

Gelis taught many world class teachers and performers, such as Eugene Blinov (balalaika), Tamara Volkskaya (domra), Sergey Bashian (bandura), and others. I was studying with Gelis from 1972 until his death in 1976.

All this time, I worked as an electrical technician, and taught guitar in musical studios. In 1972, I became a professional guitar player. I now have more than 25 years of experience as a guitar performer and teacher.

While studying with Gelis, I began working on the arrangements and adaptations of music of Bach, Scriabin, Chopin, List, and other composers. I made the arrangements in a more free form, while trying to express the style and the content by the means of guitar. It helped me in my artistic and teaching career, and set me free from the strict dogmatic frames of the genres. That's why I play and adapt any genre of music. My repertoire includes classical, jazz, folk (Russian, Ukrainian, Jewish), and popular music of different countries. I adapted more than 1,000 works for guitar as solo, for guitar ensembles, accompanist of the voice, which are ready for publication.

During my artistic career, I traveled over almost the whole former USSR. I worked as a soloist, accompanist, part of ensemble of the Kiev and Moscow Philharmonic Orchestra, "Moscowconcert," and taught in the musical schools. I have played music for various movies, TV and radio shows, and theater performances. I performed and arranged new music of Ukrainian composers (for radio, theater, movie). Many singers collaborated with me (I worked with all male and female voices.) The singers, which couldn't work with other guitar players, worked well with SHAPIRO, to page 5 me. Therefore, I made new programs in a short period of time. Auditoriums, which I played for, were very diverse. These were colleges, schools, hospitals, jails, factories, philharmonic, etc. I always feel the reaction from the public, and that's why performing every piece of music for me is a revelation.

I have taught children as young as 5, and adults as old as 75 at different levels to play the guitar. I have developed my own system of teaching guitar, which can be used for teaching different musical instruments. I want to inculcate to my pupils the musical logic of thinking.

I taught students who were rejected by other teachers, and, if they wanted to play, they played after a short period of time. I never chose and looked for my students, and I never advertised myself. The school committee decided on the competitive examination on who would attend my class (during the last years, 15 people competed for one spot). After 5 years of study with me, the students could not attend the Kiev Musical College because they were overqualified. My "musical grandson," Mr. Alexander Renguš, has won eight international competitions.

I arrived in America 11 months ago from Kiev, Ukraine. Here I have taught the guitar part time at the Jewish Community Center in Minneapolis. I also play the guitar as a soloist at a restaurant in St. Paul called Quail on the Hill. On the 18 of May, I have participated in a concert at the University of St. Thomas with seven other guitar players of Minnesota. I was warmly greeted by the public. After the concert, all participants congratulated me on my performance.

I appeared twice in downtown St. Paul with singer Shura Volovets. I also arranged other programs with singer Seca Bagdassarova. I have also appeared with a singer and bandura player, Mr. Michael Chechya-otka in concerts.

I want to use this occasion and to express my sincere and deep thanks to all my relatives who very warmly met me here. They helped me to start a new life, got me a car as gift, and taught me how to drive a car (I have never driven a car before). I think that without help from David and Mark Feldman I couldn't begin my musical career here. They are helping me as translators and finding the necessary contacts.

Mrs. Carol Harris and Mrs. Bernice Freetch helped me to learn English. My tutors are Patrick O'Connor and Steve Zweifel, they also helped a lot. I can now read and write in English freely, and I have already read 10 books in English. I also want to thank my Guitarist colleagues whom I've met since I have been here.

Mr. Chris Osgood opened to me the Guitar World of Minnesota and gave me a recommendation. Mr. Alan Johnson invited me to his house, and included me in the concert of eight guitar players. Mr. Jeffrey Van invited me to the university, and gave me a lot of encouragement. Mr. Douglas W. Smith invited me to the Music Tech and gave me many useful advices. He also offered to record my demo tape, which I have recorded under the supervision of Mr. Mike Kern (I can use it as DAT).

After my concert I was introduced to all the participants: Mr. Anthony Titus, Mr. Tim Johnson, Mr. Daniel Esjtem, Mr. Joseph Hagedorn, Ms. Joan Griffith, Ms. Clea Gallana, Mr. Tony Hauser, and Mr. Brian Luckett.

I also want to thank the violinsts Mrs. Anne-Monique Rapoport. She gave me the contacts with other musicians. I also want to thank Ms. Karen Zorn who invited me to the MacPhail School. I recorded (my DAT) under the supervision of Eric Nelson, and I want to thank him for his help. Composer Adi Yeshaya invited me to his house, and gave me many useful advises and contacts. I also got a good advice and many contacts from the composer Mariam Greberg.

Mr. Phil Nusbaum sent me a very warm letter, and different application forms. Mr. Christopher Kachian invited me to his house and gave me many useful advises and contacts. Mr. Kachian also showed me his new book, which is yet to be published. I liked the book very much, it is written to help composers who write for the guitar. I liked the deep and serious method system of this book. For the first time I've seen such a good work. I think this book is very unique.

I came here alone, because my wife Anna has died in December of 1994. I like to read, and go to concerts. I like to play soccer, ping-pong, and swimming. I am in a good performing shape, and I want to carry my music to people. I want to play, teach, publish, and record Compact Discs.

The Minnesota Guitar Society would like to warmly welcome Mr. Shapiro to Minnesota. He can be contacted for further information at 945-0950.

Gillespie for a month. Also in the group were heavyweights Milt Jackson, Percy Heath and John Coltrane. He majored in music at Wayne State University in Detroit. After graduation in 1955, Burrell toured with pianist Oscar Peterson. During the following year he moved to New York and began performing and recording with many of jazz's greatest artists. A small sampling includes: Ray Brown, Stan Getz, Billie Holliday, Sonny Rollins, Jimmy Smith, Ron Carter and more. He's put his highly individual stamp on over 70 recordings as a leader and has been a sideman on 250 to 300 discs. Duke Ellington designated Burrell as his favorite guitarist.

In May, 1993 Kenny performed at the Lurexof in Minneapolis. My wife and I had him and the Condells over for dinner and he brought a tape of the first rehearsal of his extended piece written for the Harlem Boys Choir which was premiered at the Kennedy Center later that year. At that occasion I recall him talking about his desire to do a CD of solos, duets and trios. The result was Lett Us Bloom (Concord) which is one of my favorite discs because of its intimate nature. In March, 1996 Kenny played at the Guitar Summit at the Ordway and we had dinner with him before the performance. I asked him if he was able to choose all of the material for this CD. He said that's a priority he's had to fight for continuously over his 40 years in the recording business. He hasn't had to compromise and has been able to maintain his honest approach to the music he loves.

Listening to a Kenny Burrell disc from the 50's, 60's, 70's or 80's sounds like it was recorded yesterday. The classic music that he chooses just doesn't wear out like so much of the disposable “fusion” orн“smooth jazz” of recent years. Another uncompromising musician, Tony Bennett, writes on the liner notes to Kenny's 1991 release Sunset to Sunset (Fantasy), “In a commercial world where the buck moves first, in a financial atmosphere where musical integrity is not even allowed in the back door, a musician who stands his ground and performs with his head and his heart, with his integrity intact, becomes a David standing up to Goliath. Kenny Burrell and his small company of musical giants... have created an album that stands the test of time. This, after all, is what determines a work of art.”

Kenny led a quartet at St. Paul's Artist's Quarter on August 27-29, 1996. This was the same group he had in 1993 with pianist Mikkel Romstad, bassist Keith Boyles, and drummer Sherman Ferguson. The performance we saw was first-rate. Once again my wife and I had the pleasure of having the Condells and Kenny out to the house for an afternoon. This time he brought a cassette of his soon-to-be-released disc on Concord of a live performance at New York's Blue Note club. For the past 18 years Kenny has taught a course in jazz at the University of California-Los Angeles. As of 1996, he's been elevated to director of UCLA's jazz studies program. Kenny's deep involvement with education demonstrates his commitment to the art. I recall

Mysterious Habitats

(Guitar Solo, GSP 104/CD: total time: 50 min. 21 sec.)

By Gary Jayner

I was at Guitar Solo in San Francisco (strong contender for 'coolest guitar store anywhere'), and asked about sheet music or books exploring odd metered music for guitar. For example, has Tim Sparks put out a book of his Eastern European studies? Store manager Bob asks "Do you know about Dusan?" He dug out a folio entitled 7 Easier Polyrhythmic Studies by Dusan Bogdanovic, published by Guitar Solo. I took it home and started working with the first pieces, every few minutes re-checking the cover to make sure that "Easier" was in the title. Later I returned to purchase Bogdanovic's CD entitled Mysterious Habitats which contains his performance of several of the studies. It clarified the music (turned out that I was on the right track) as well as opened a new vista of guitar creativity.

Bogdanovic employs a bright, clean attack, percussive hits, and sometimes prepares guitar (adjacent strings joined with staples, dubbed a "Gamutstar") to bring out with clarity the diverging lines in his polyrhythmic, polyrhythmic music. He communicates a classical sensibility while mixing jazz and classical styles with music of multiple ethnicities, i.e. World Music.

This CD has sources in Middle-Eastern, African, American jazz, folk and country, Balkan, Levantine, and Indian idioms. The melodic motifs are subjected to transforming twists and turns. One is struck by the simultaneous simplicity and sophistication of his compositions. When you play through his published sheet music these coexisting qualities especially stand out.

The title piece, a lovely and surprisingly playable composition, displays a melody that unfolds over a 3/4 ostinato that is set askew in the early measures by the insertion of one bar of 9/8. The folks at the Podium in Dinkytown tell me that they have been selling many copies of the sheet music. Polyrhythmic Study No. 1, The Reversible Cowboy is a perfectly fitting puzzle employing a 3/16 line on top of a 2/4 line. My response on first hearing it was "Leo Kottke on a nylon string, but turned inside out." The printed music offers left hand suggestions, but not right hand guidance. I found my experience with Jerry Reed-styled Nashville picking to stand in good stead.

Bogdanovic's own comments in the liner notes are revealing and poetic. "Today when we are confronted with both tribalism and total abstraction, extreme simplicity as well as complexity, I believe it is possible to create art which speaks on a gut level, and yet is built with much refinement and complexity of structure and language." He has described his work perfectly, proving to be intellectually as well as artistically satisfying. "Mysterious Habitats are always present; they are things of the spirit, markers along the way, each representing a particular gesture, feeling, or state of being. These offspring of what I call 'questionably my life' have an existence of their own, and I hope this recording will be a way of communicating them to a larger whole.'"

So what are we talking about here, a CD of great original music for quality listening or a guitarist's study tool? Both. The nonguitarist in my family commented on the beauty of the music. An objective, guitar-free comment from her is always a good sign of the universality of the music. Mysterious Habitats rewards scrupulous study and also makes for satisfying background music, if you'll forgive the term. Recommended.

And speaking of great guitar shops, do you have a favorite? If so drop me a line (in care of the MGS), letting me know where it is and why you love it.

him saying, "What greater thing, than to be able to inspire a student to learn?" I neglected to ask where he was off to after St. Paul, but soon found out when I tuned in my car radio to KBEM (88.5 FM). The trio of Kenny Burrell, Jimmy Smith (organ) and Jimmy Jackson (drums) were headlining a live broadcast of the Detroit Jazz Festival on Labor Day. It sounded as though the huge audience loved the 75-minute set.

We're fortunate that at an age when many people are contemplating retirement, Kenny's going full speed ahead with performing, recording, composing and directing. He still plays with blindness and agility but has a maturity and depth that is so rare. Musicians love to be on stage with him because he's such a great person to work with. For me, one of the delights of getting older is to have the opportunity to spend some time with an artist I've been listening to since I was 10 years old. When the history of jazz is written, Kenny Burrell will be a major figure.

Daniel Estrem has recorded and produced six guitar duo discs of his arrangements from the classical and jazz repertoire with John Holmquist. He has a private dental practice in Little Canada, MN.
