RE: DAY ONE USE OF DEFERRED ENFORCED DEPARTURE (DED) TO PROTECT 2.2 MILLION AT-RISK IMMIGRANTS, INCLUDING 400k+ TPS HOLDERS AT IMMEDIATE RISK OF LOSING WORK PERMITS AND STATUS

Dear Vice President Joseph Biden:

On behalf of the 213 undersigned state, local, and national immigrant, labor, faith, civil rights, and legal organizations, we request that you commit, on day one of a presidency, to use your authority to grant Deferred Enforced Departure (DED) to individuals who either are currently protected by Temporary Protected Status (TPS) and are in danger of losing it, or merited a grant of TPS under the terms of the statute but have been stymied by the current administration. Such a commitment to immediate action is urgently needed to reassure current and potential TPS holders that in the event you are elected, they need not fear removal or loss of work authorization.

We acknowledge your current commitment to TPS for Venezuela; review of other countries for potential TPS designations; and pursuit of a permanent legislative roadmap to citizenship for all immigrants—as outlined in your platforms, Joe Biden’s Agenda and the Latino Community and The Biden Plan for Securing our Values as a Nation of Immigrants. Respectfully, however, these commitments are insufficient. If elected president, you will have authority to protect these populations from day one, and we ask that you exercise that authority.

Critically, over 400,000 current TPS holders from El Salvador, Haiti, Honduras, Nepal, Nicaragua, and Sudan are at serious risk of losing their work permits and protection from deportation. The Trump administration attempted to terminate TPS for over 400,000 TPS holders, and their fate is in the hands of multiple federal district court injunctions that have thus far prevented the termination of their TPS status. Most recently, the Ninth Circuit issued a decision in the Ramos litigation, which allows the administration to begin the process of ending TPS for the challenged countries. These TPS holders cannot wait for the legislative process or TPS designation review process. For these individuals, an immediate DED grant would ensure there are no gaps in their work authorization or protection from deportation.

Meanwhile, people from the Bahamas (14,200), Cameroon, El Salvador (750,000), Guatemala (600,000), Guinea (930), Haiti (100,000), Honduras (400,000), Lebanon, Nepal (36,795), Nicaragua (54,926), Sierra Leone (1,180), Somalia (455), South Sudan (96), Sudan (774), Syria (6,934), Venezuela (200,000), and Yemen (1,646) are likely all eligible for TPS under the statute. Thus, we urge you to utilize DED on day one of your presidency to provide interim protections while your administration builds a foundation for subsequent TPS designations and pursues legislation for a path to citizenship.

I. TEMPORARY PROTECTED STATUS (TPS) AND DEFERRED ENFORCED DEPARTURE (DED)

A country can be designated for TPS to protect foreign nationals in the United States from civil, political, and humanitarian crises in their home country that make it unsafe for them to return, or whose suspension of deportation serves other United States foreign policy or domestic interests. While TPS is statutorily based, DED stems from the president’s constitutional powers to conduct foreign relations, provides similar protections, and is triggered when an individual is identified for removal. In this way, a DED designation uses minimal resources administratively and has an immediate effect for those who qualify. Thus, a Biden administration could utilize DED to immediately provide relief to eligible noncitizens in the United States, including access to employment authorization and release from detention.

II. POTENTIAL IMPACT

Approximately 2.2 million nationals from fifteen countries currently stand to benefit from an immediate DED designation: the Bahamas, Cameroon, El Salvador, Guatemala, Guinea, Haiti, Honduras, Lebanon, Nepal, Nicaragua, Sierra Leone, Somalia, South Sudan, Sudan, Syria, Venezuela, and Yemen. All are at risk due to different roadblocks to protection under TPS:

- 1,342,495 people from El Salvador, Haiti, Honduras, Nepal, Nicaragua, and Sudan; 400k people from these countries are currently awaiting the final results of litigation challenging the current administration’s unjustified termination, but more than a million people have arrived in many years since these countries were last designated, and they should be protected given the extraordinarily dangerous conditions there.3
- 9,131 people from Somalia, South Sudan, Syria, and Yemen were denied re-designation of TPS by the current administration and will lose TPS once their extensions expire.
- At least 816,310 people from the Bahamas, Cameroon, Guatemala, Guinea, Lebanon, Sierra Leone, and Venezuela should have received an initial TPS designation under the current administration due to country conditions, but did not.

The need for relief for these people is dire and immediate. Again, while we are thankful for your current commitment to TPS, millions of noncitizens in the United States will not be safe without immediate protection or able to work and provide for their families in the first few months of your administration. A potential Biden presidency must begin by extending DED protection to these populations on day one, as a bridge to TPS or other more permanent solutions, especially for the over 400,000 current TPS holders previously protected under the Ramos litigation. We thank you for your continued commitment to the immigrant community and a fair and just immigration system at large. This relief will not only benefit millions of individuals in the United States, but also their families, employers, and communities here and in their countries of origin. Thank you for your time and consideration. If you have any questions or concerns, please feel
