Office of the Governor | State of Wisconsin

May 29, 2020

Dear Friends in Service and Volunteering,

One of the great things about Wisconsin is how we care for each other and how that plays out every single day. When times get tough, we rally together, roll up our sleeves and get to work to help our neighbors and communities. AmeriCorps members are a wonderful example of how everyday ordinary people pitch in to help out of the generosity of their hearts.

As Governor, I have witnessed the significant impact that AmeriCorps members have throughout our state. I have had the opportunity to serve alongside them at schools, visit disaster recovery sites where AmeriCorps members helped communities recover from storm damage, meet with AmeriCorps members helping those in recovery from substance abuse, and to hear numerous accounts of the difference they are making for the people of Wisconsin.

As the pages of this annual report for Serve Wisconsin will demonstrate, AmeriCorps members in Wisconsin have committed to helping their communities in numerous ways in all corners of our state. They provide an invaluable service to our state and their local communities, contributing hundreds of thousands of hours of service to help the citizens of Wisconsin.

I am proud to support the AmeriCorps members who serve across the state of Wisconsin and the goals of Serve Wisconsin to expand the scope and reach of AmeriCorps programs and volunteer efforts throughout our state in the coming years. I look forward to increasing national service in our state and helping to foster the spirit of volunteerism demonstrated by the people of Wisconsin.

Sincerely,

National Service Recognition Day 2019

Annually in April on National Service Recognition Day, local leaders across the country honor AmeriCorps members and Senior Corps volunteers for the difference they make in local communities.

On April 2, 2019, Governor Evers celebrated the impact made by national service participants in Wisconsin at an event in Racine alongside numerous elected officials from Racine and Kenosha and local AmeriCorps members and Senior Corps volunteers.

Celebrations of Service

AmeriCorps members from programs throughout the state gathered for three regional events to celebrate the coming end of their service and to connect with AmeriCorps members from other programs.

Beaver Creek Reserve (April 29-30, 2019)

Over forty AmeriCorps members and program staff came together at the Beaver Creek Reserve in Fall River, WI for a celebration of service and to complete service projects around Earth Day. Over the course of two days, multiple projects were completed around the reserve, including the clearing of trail, painting and cleaning cabins, and other upkeep and maintenance on the grounds. Additionally, members and staff enjoyed hiking on the reserve and the opportunity to come together with other programs to celebrate their time with AmeriCorps.

Madison (May 29, 2019)

Over fifty AmeriCorps members and program staff from the Madison area came together at the Lussier Family Heritage Center in Madison to celebrate their year of service with AmeriCorps. As part of the event, members had the opportunity to reflect on their service, engage in interactive sessions with guest presenters, hike the surrounding trails, participate in various games and competitions, and come together with other programs to celebrate their time with AmeriCorps.

Rib Mountain State Park (July 31, 2019)

Roughly seventy AmeriCorps members and program staff, family members, and other guests from five Northern and Central Wisconsin AmeriCorps Programs attended a Celebration of Service on July 31 at Rib Mountain State Park near Wausau. The potluck picnic included a performance by a local Hmong dance group, a scavenger hunt to locations throughout the park, activities with therapy dogs, a "service poetry" table, musical performances, and other activities to allow everyone to celebrate the achievements of members during their terms of service. As a reminder of their commitment to serve over the past year and beyond, AmeriCorps members were led to renew their AmeriCorps pledge by Jeanne Duffy, the Executive Director of Serve Wisconsin.

Trainings for AmeriCorps Programs and Organizations

Serve Wisconsin hosted several in-person and digital trainings for AmeriCorps program staff to help enhance their programs and for organizations exploring creating an AmeriCorps program in Wisconsin.

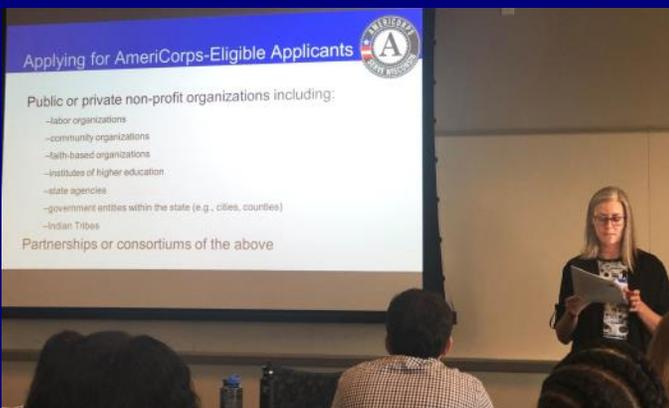

New Program and Staff Bootcamp

This annual training provided an overview of the larger landscape of AmeriCorps and national service, rules and regulation, program management, site management, compliance, and enhancing the experience for their AmeriCorps members.

AmeriCorps Program Director Workshop

This annual training brought together staff from all AmeriCorps programs in the state to provide training on new policies or procedures and relevant topics for the upcoming program year.

AmeriCorps Grant Writing Workshops

This training was held prior to the two grant application requests for proposals that are issued each year. The training helped current and potential programs become more familiar with the AmeriCorps program grant application process and requirements, including the application instructions, program narrative, budget, logic models, performance measures and data collection.

Disaster Recovery Projects

Serve Wisconsin has expanded the ability of Wisconsin AmeriCorps programs and members to respond to local disasters, through sponsoring recovery projects and coordinating with Team Rubicon and local governments.

In July 2019, Serve Wisconsin helped mobilize volunteers for its first week-long disaster recovery project in response to flood damage. The team worked with Team Rubicon completing projects in Adams, Juneau, and Monroe Counties to clean debris from creeks, rebuild homes, clean out basements of flood damaged homes, and restoring Glenwood Park in Kendall, WI.

Additionally, Serve Wisconsin has mobilized volunteers in response to severe storms in Northern and Central Wisconsin in 2019.

2018-2019 AmeriCorps Stories of Service and Member Reflections

Bright Ideas 2019: Be a loud 'yes' for black and brown students when everyone else says 'no'

By Reginald Lee and Iaina Smith, Scholars of Excellence coordinators at Cherokee Middle School
By Negassi Tesfamichael in The Capital Times on December 31, 2018 as part of the Bright Ideas 2019 series

Students of color need a program that is 100 percent committed to their excellence. Along with Madison School and Community Recreation, we created Scholars of Excellence, which started earlier this school year. It fosters a community of self-growth, acceptance, high expectations and accountability rooted in a place of love for 25 black and Latino students at Cherokee Heights Middle School.

Students in Scholars of Excellence have varying degrees of challenges in school. Within the first half of the school year, students have seen a steady improvement in both academics and behavior. More importantly, they have created a space where these scholars can thrive.

Like Scholars of Excellence, we need to be dedicated to teaching our black and brown students to celebrate the beauty and dopeness of being a person of color, despite what society might say. Adults can only push students to go places where they truly believe they are capable of going.

We want all of our students to be college, community and career ready, but our students need more targeted support to help conquer the complex barriers life has thrown at them outside of the classroom. We believe all of our Scholars of Excellence are college-bound. Students of color in MMSD face an uphill battle and need adults who will fight for them and with them so they get the education that they deserve. Scholars of Excellence focuses on building self-value in our students by forming a small village of support and encouragement along with their parents. We need more collaboration and individualized support if Madison is ever going to make a dent in the longstanding achievement gap. Adults need to say yes, you can reach your goals when the statistics say no.

Iaina Smith completed her second term as an AmeriCorps member at Cherokee Heights Middle School with Partners for After School Success (PASS). Reginald Lee is a PASS AmeriCorps alumnus coordinating after school programming at Cherokee Heights Middle School through Madison School & Community Recreation.

Building Brighter Futures in Milwaukee

By Angie Mason, Milwaukee Christian Center

Printed in the November/December 2019 edition of NAWIC Today

Official Publication of the National Association of Women in Construction

“I am what success looks like.” It wasn’t until this year that Jasmine, a 22-year-old young woman from Milwaukee, could repeat this mantra with confidence.

Nine months ago, Jasmine visited the Milwaukee Christian Center’s (MCC) food pantry to help a friend who was in need of food and diapers. While there, she came upon the opportunity to join MCC’s YouthBuild, a program in Milwaukee that empowers young adults, ages 18-24, to overcome challenges and move towards family-sustaining careers through education and hands-on construction training while building affordable homes for low-income families.

“Since I was 13 years old, I have been one of the sole providers in my family. I’m a lover of language—a writer—but high school was never easy for me. I haven’t had a lot of structure in my life, and while I’ve been in lots of programs to get my high school diploma, it wasn’t until YouthBuild that I felt I could do it. Here, I’ve been surrounded by genuinely caring people who want me to succeed,” Jasmine shares. “Math has always been my biggest obstacle. My YouthBuild teachers helped me sharpen my skills and made me feel more confident. They showed me my improvement and helped me face my fear.”

YouthBuild has also provided Jasmine an opportunity to learn construction skills while building affordable, single-family homes in the neighborhood. “I can’t tell you what it feels like to build a garage from the ground up and to know that I was a part of it,” Jasmine confesses. “Just the other day, when we were working on a roof, I climbed a ladder to the top and asked a friend to take a photo of me up there. It seems silly, but I wanted proof, something to hold on to, to remind myself that I am what success looks like.”

This May, Jasmine completed her GED and received her high school diploma at the Milwaukee Area Technical College’s graduation ceremony. Earlier in the year, she attended a National Association of Women in Construction workshop and made a connection with OPCMIA Local 599—a plasterer’s and cement masons association. They took an interest in her and are planning to meet with her in the near future to explore potential apprenticeship opportunities.

Jasmine has been a great asset to YouthBuild this year and has come incredibly far. This was illustrated by a recent YouthBuild service project she completed for a homeless shelter in Milwaukee. The shelter needed higher tables in their kitchen that could accommodate storage carts underneath. Jasmine helped redesign and deliver the tables. It wasn’t until she was at the shelter that she remembered staying there as a child. “Through YouthBuild, I have been able to give back to where I came from,” she says proudly.

“I still have my ups and downs,” Jasmine admits, “but YouthBuild has helped me feel like I belong somewhere. For the first time in my life, I can look in the mirror and say with confidence, ‘I am what success looks like.’”

YouthBuild is a program of the Milwaukee Christian Center, which is a multi-service organization that works to build strong neighborhoods full of opportunity. It approaches that work through four core areas: housing, youth development, older adults, and food security – serving over 7,500 people each year. What began with American Baptist roots providing outreach to immigrants on Milwaukee’s south side in 1921, MCC now serves youth, families, and older adults of all races, ethnicities, and ages throughout Milwaukee County.

Milwaukee construction program trainee looks to college

By Sarah Lipo of Milwaukee Neighborhood News Service
November 18, 2018

Jotshua Vega Marcon arrives at the South Side home construction site two hours before his shift starts, and he usually packs up to head home about an hour after the rest of the team leaves for the day.

Vega Marcon is determined to learn the construction trade, and the house is providing a great learning opportunity. When Vega Marcon, 23, first started working on it a year ago, “It was an open house you could see through, like a skeleton,” he said. Back then, he said he barely knew how to correctly hold a hammer, and he watched videos to teach himself how to build stairs.

Vega Marcon, a resident of West Allis, is a participant in the Milwaukee Christian Center’s YouthBuild program, which provides young adults ages 18-25 with hands-on construction training, while creating homes for low- or moderate-income families.

John Kaye, a project director at MCC, is in charge of housing efforts. He said individuals can “go to school half time, work on getting their GED (diploma) or high school equivalency and also learn to build a house.” All trainees are members of AmeriCorps.

Construction on the 13th Street house began in October 2017, about the same time Vega Marcon joined the program after hearing about it from a friend. Construction can take longer than a year, Kaye said, since trainees only work half days.

As long as individuals show up for work, they receive scholarship funds. Vega Marcon is now a full-time AmeriCorps member serving as a construction assistant for YouthBuild.

“Now that I am a full-time member, I get more scholarship money,” he said.

He’s earned $6,000 so far. He added that as soon as he has enough money, he plans to go to Milwaukee Area Technical College and become an electronics technician.

Lois Nugent, the MCC YouthBuild coordinator, noted that many individuals have felt anxious about starting a new, unfamiliar job. “But, few of us have ever been handed a hammer and asked to go build a house,” she said.

Vega Marcon set goals to finish his high school education and seek training that would lead to permanent family-sustaining employment, Nugent said, adding that he has earned a high school diploma and multiple industry certifications.

Along with building a house, Vega Marcon said he learned to cooperate with others and worked to improve himself.

“It’s not easy. You got to be willing to be open-minded,” he said. He added that he loves being productive and busy.

Nugent said Vega Marcon stands out for several reasons. “Jotshua realizes learning doesn’t stop when you get your diploma,” she said, adding that he looked for opportunities to go above and beyond to help others. For example, Vega Marcon often volunteers at the MCC Senior Center, which provides healthy meals, recreation opportunities and health checks for those over 60.

Nugent added that leaders look for opportunities to make things better even when there’s little personal gain, while also supporting their team. In addition to providing job opportunities for young adults and creating homes for low-income families, the program also demonstrates how far a person can go when given the opportunity, Nugent said. It also shows the impact they can have on their community, she added.

YouthBuild “also helps stabilize the rest of the block,” Kaye said.

“When people move in, they become part of a neighborhood,” added Nugent. They are “invested in the neighborhood, and people take pride in their property.” She mentioned a “rollover effect” on the neighborhood, adding that the residents living next door to the completed YouthBuild house recently put up new siding on their house.

YouthBuild is supported by the Corporation for National and Community Service, the Department of Labor (through a partnership with the Milwaukee Area Workforce Investment Board), the City of Milwaukee Community Development Grants Administration, HUD, and others, according to its website.

Crawford County Farm to School teaches children about food waste

By Charley Preusser - Crawford County Independent & Kickapoo Scout

June 26, 2019

CRAWFORD COUNTY - Food waste was the topic of a unique presentation at North Crawford Elementary School last month.

Dana Scheffen organized the event for the third grade classes of Jean Ottoway and Chelsea Beinborn. Scheffen is the Crawford County Farm-to-School Community Outreach Coordinator & Nutrition Educator.

The third graders began by sorting locally grown sweet potatoes. Then, they had a chance to eat some of them. “The idea was to help the students understand that not all food that is produced is sold,” Scheffen said. “However, some of what is not sold can be used—even if it is not perfect.”

The sweet potatoes had been donated to the Viroqua-based Community Hunger Solutions because they were not suitable for sale due to size or other imperfections. Although the sweet potatoes were ‘seconds,’ many, but not all, were quite suitable for the dinner table.

Jeannette Burlingame, the Community Hunger Solutions Program Coordinator, brought the sweet potatoes to the school and explained the situation to the students.

Burlingame also taught the students how to identify what was a usable sweet potato and what would have to be composted.

Burlingame wasn’t the only one helping the students understand food waste and the possible solutions to it. Also activated for the presentation were high school students in Candace Petersen’s family and consumer education class, who assisted with a hands-on demonstration.

Under the direction of their teacher, the high school students assisted the third-graders in making purple sweet potato hash browns. Farm-to-School Coordinator Scheffen explained that she reached out to the high school class for a little help, when she realized this part of the presentation was going to involve hot oil and a grater.

When the half-hour event was over, Scheffen was confident the students had learned something about food waste and maybe how good locally grown sweet potatoes can taste.

“I love working with that school,” Scheffen said of North Crawford. The Farm-to-School Coordinator is an AmeriCorps volunteer position that works with eight local school districts on a variety of presentations and projects.

One of the program’s goals is to bridge the gap between food service directors in the schools and area farmers, according to Scheffen. The Farm-to-School Coordinator visits each of the eight districts once every month.

Some of the other events Farm-to-School was involved in locally this year included demonstrations on fermentation and making humus at the Soldiers Grove Library and participating in the Winter Wellness Event at the Gays Mills Community Commerce Center.

Scheffen’s term as the Farm-to-School Coordinator will end in August. She is currently busy working to make the job easier for the next Crawford County AmeriCorps Farm-to-School Community Outreach Coordinator & Nutrition Educator.

Member Reflection from Jeremy Ault Teach for America Milwaukee

The spring in Milwaukee has been very cold and snowy. This has negatively impacted migrating birds. They are unable to build nests and food and are, in general, in a weakened state. Recently, we've been working through a unit on spring, talking about the weather and the animals. My students took an interest in the story about the birds and requested we read some more books. So, we read through two books that discussed birds, one of which highlights what birds do over the winter and their migration back north in the spring. The students, in turn, decided to make their own bird feeders to help the birds out with finding food. The students, along with my assistant teacher and I all built bird feeders with Popsicle sticks. The bird feeders themselves aligned well with K5 and 1st grade math curriculum. Students were asked to count out a special amount of sticks and then organize them in rectangles in an alternating pattern. The craft itself was an excellent kinesthetic activity that challenged their 1:1 correspondence, special recognition, and their fine-motor skills.

Twin Service - Serving Students in Two AmeriCorps Programs

While there are many ways that we think of twins as being similar, making a simultaneous decision to dedicate a year to national service working with students through AmeriCorps is typically not one of them. Taylor and Jessie Zimmerman though did make that decision, as they were looking for an opportunity to build upon their skills working with youth in the Madison area after they both completed their master's degree in social work. While both wanted more direct experience putting their coursework into action working with youth, they chose different AmeriCorps programs and ages of students being reached for their service. Taylor has spent her term of service with AmeriCorps serving with Partners for After School Success (PASS) and working with high school students, while Jessie has served with Schools of Hope and worked with elementary students.

AmeriCorps had always been on Taylor's radar as a way to give back in a meaningful way, as "it was always on my bucket list to join a program such as AmeriCorps. I wanted to take my personal experiences and learning and apply it to giving back to a community." She has cherished the supportive environment she found with PASS that has brought together people with different interests and backgrounds and has given her the opportunity to connect to both young people and the city of Madison through direct service

The favorite aspect of Jessie's AmeriCorps service with Schools of Hope AmeriCorps has definitely been working with the kids, finding that "as much as you are teaching them, they are definitely teaching you just as much. They remind you of the importance to smile, laugh, and just find a way to enjoy each and every day. They always have something to share and teach us if we take the time to listen."

While both are with different programs, Taylor describes how "it is always great to have someone to share what occurred throughout our day to day service in our programs and be able to relate to both the accomplishments and sometimes the struggles we encounter. Since being in AmeriCorps together we get to share in similar but separate experiences and go on this journey together. We have always been a pair and it is nice to continue our journey together through AmeriCorps." This journey of having a positive impact is set to continue, as both plan on finding ways to continue working with youth and families in the social work field, hoping to continue making a difference for communities and the lives of others.

Kindergartners take part in first ever Wisconsin School Garden Day

ARBOR VITAE - Do you know where your food comes from? Kindergartners at Arbor Vitae-Woodruff Elementary do. They have been growing their own fruits and vegetables all year.

Today five and six-year olds were able to show off their gardening skills to their parents, as their work culminated in a final celebration as part of the first-ever Wisconsin School Garden Day. The students also sorted seeds and learned about composting.

Each kindergartener has been partnered with a 5th grader throughout the year, who has been helping them with planting and weeding.

Organizer Adriane Morabito said it is important for young people to know where their food comes from.

"It teaches them important skills like empathy, compassion, and kindness," said Morabito. "It also helps them eat healthy," as throughout the year, kindergartners learned what a balanced meal looks like.

Morabito added she is looking forward to partnering with other schools in the Northwoods for garden-based learning.

Parent Michelle Hinkens thought her son Adam learned many important lessons this year.

"I think this is very important because it's a life skill that all kids need to learn and it's a very hands-on learning opportunity for the kids," said Hinkens.

Adriane Morabito served as an AmeriCorps member with the Wisconsin DPI AmeriCorps Farm to School Program at the Howard Suamico School District.

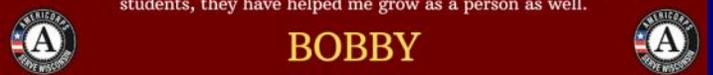

I am thankful for Easter Seals Wisconsin AmeriCorps program for teaching me about inclusion and acceptance towards individuals with different abilities.

Watching our campers enjoy camp, make new friendships, and try new things are just a few of the many reasons I keep coming back!

I am thankful for this incredible opportunity to serve the Barron Area Community.

I have always wanted to be able to pour into the youth and help them grow. Being a part of this organization has given me the ability to see students grow into incredible young adults and reach their dreams. As much as I have helped these students, they have helped me grow as a person as well.

I am thankful that my service with the Wausau School District has encouraged my passion for teaching.

From my experience working with students, I have witnessed many obstacles being overcome and I am grateful that I am a part of it.

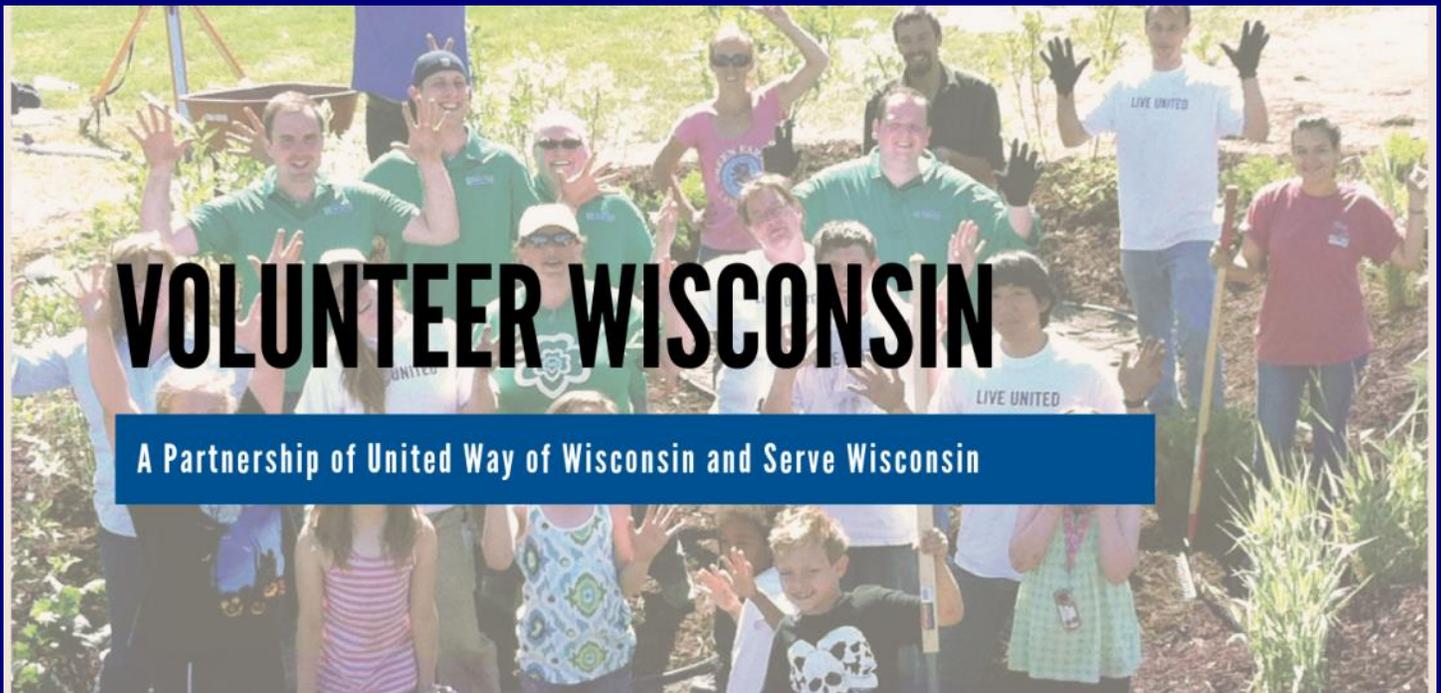

Every day, I am beyond thankful for the 6,800+ hours I served as an After School Youth Development Specialist at the Lunda Center Boys & Girl's Club.

The experience provided me with a strong foundation in serving diverse populations of youth and was a key element in supporting my entry this Fall into a graduate program in School Psychology.

I am excited to continue with the next steps of my education and career, and I thank AmeriCorps for being an endless source of inspiration and for opening up continual doors of opportunity for me in the field of Education!
