The year is 1947 and World War II is far from over. A new energy source, believed by some to have an alien origin, has changed the nature of the battlefield. Harnessed first by the Germans and dubbed Vrill-Kultur (VK), this substance’s extraordinary properties have allowed the world’s powers to develop new, more powerful weapons of warfare. Now infantry and tanks are joined on the field of battle by giant walking armored fighting vehicles. These «walkers» ans other. VK-powered weapons have shifted the balance of power. Old alliances have been broken blocs - the Allies, the Axies, ans the Sino-Soviet Union (SSU). Outside of these blocs, a handful of countries still cling to relative neutrality in a world wracked by war.

THE ALLIES Besieged by fascist ans communist dictatorships, the democracies of the world have banded together as the Allies. Gathering around the United States of America, the Allies have created the largest military industrial complex the world has ever known. Even si, resources are stretched tine across fronts spanning the globe. As 1947 dawns, the Allies grow weary of the war, but realize that they cannot falter. They can accept nothing less than unconditional surrender from the dictatorships that threaten democracy.

THE AXIS The assassination of the Führer, Adolf HITLER, in 1943 paved the way for the removal of the old Nazi regime and the rise of a totalitarian state, the Axis, Germany’s early discovery of Vrill-Kultur (VK) places them at the forefront of advanced military technology. Axis soldiers fight to end the twin threats of communism and capitalist exploitation, but most of them are unaware that the Vrill are likely to return, and only the planet united under the Axis will have the strength to stop them and save humanity.

THE SINO-SOVIEET Surrounded by enemies, the Soviet Union and communist China joined forces to form the Sino-Soviet Union (SSU). No other bloc has suffered as many casualties. Despite this, the SSU has grown stronger with communist revolutions driving territorial expansion. The proletariat tirelessly toiles to manufacture new engines of war, and their progressive designs remain on the cutting edge of modern combat technology. The day nears when the world will be enlightened by communist ideals and throw off the yoke of capitalist oppression.

THE YEAR IS 1947

The war that started a decade ago still rages across the globe.

The discovery of an alien spacecraft in the Antarctic has led to the development of new revolutionary weapons of war that have surpassed all but the most advanced technology.

Old alliances have fragmented and new ones have arisen as the major blocs fight the world over for the newly discovered valuable VK resource that powers the new technology.
