A Note from our Executive Director:

Prince George’s County’s Gateway Arts District is the first and largest arts district in the State of Maryland. This year's Gateway Open Studio Tour (OST), an annual event where local artists open their studios for visitors and gallerists, celebrated a record number of artists and attendees from across the DMV and beyond. In a May 8, 2019 article Washington Post so aptly described, “Maryland’s Gateway Arts District Swelled into Cultural Destination. Here are 4 Places to Visit While You're There”. We thank our media supporters for validating what we know to be true; Art Lives Here!

We invite you to continue to experience the mosaic of arts and cultural events the county has to offer throughout the summer; Lake Arbor Jazz Festival, Prince George’s African American Museum and Cultural Center workshops and exhibits, and theatre performances at Joe’s Movement Emporium just to name a few. If you missed this year’s OST, mark your calendar for 2020!

15th Annual Open Studio Tour Takes Gateway Arts District By Storm!

On May 11th, the Gateway Arts District hosted its 15th Annual Open Studio Tour (OST). Over 250 Artists from over 100 studios opened their studios so that guests could admire not only their art, but also learn more about the process that goes into creating sensational work. Hundreds of guests took part in the self-guided tour that spanned the City of Mount Rainier, Town of Brentwood, Town of North Brentwood, and City of Hyattsville. Members of the Gateway Arts District worked together to highlight their creativity and then celebrated at this year's closing party sponsored by Studio 3807's newest culinary marketplace 'Savor' and PGAHC. During the closing party, a live-projection public art installation was presented by artists Markus Dorringer and Matthias Fritz, from Austria based OMAi Collective, through PGAHC's International Artist in Residence program. Special thanks to the generous funding support by the Office of County Council Member Deni Taveras and the incredible OST planning team.

Gateway Arts District Embarks on New Marketing Strategy

PGAHC facilitated, in tandem with the 2019 Open Studio Tour, a new marketing strategy initiative for the Gateway Arts District. The strategy will include an overarching statement of visual identity and destination branding. Consultant Dionne Clemons and Gateway graphic designer Justin Bost provided initial support throughout several open sessions. Strategy work, and concept development is ongoing and invites continued participation by artists, arts and cultural organizations, governing municipalities, residents, and business related stakeholders. The Office of Council Member Deni Taveras and a Maryland State Arts Council A&E Districts technical assistance grant both support this initiative.

One to Watch: Dewey Ortiz- Director, Writer and Founder of DK Filmworks

In 2010, with the goal and vision to change the perception of African Americans in cinema, this month’s One to Watch Dewey A. Ortiz, Jr. co-founded DK Filmworks. His series “Survivor Stories”, which features four courageous D.C. women who have survived domestic abuse, won Best Web Series at the 2017 D.C. Black Film Festival. In addition to directing our living stories, Mr. Ortiz is also an imaginative writer. He wrote, directed and executive produced his first narrative short, “Comeuppance”, which screened at several festivals in 2014. Comeuppance is currently available for streaming on Amazon. In February 2019, Mr. Ortiz completed ‘The Runaways”, a powerful short filmed in Prince George’s County, MD and the District of Columbia. This film follows abused and neglected teenagers as they gather the courage to escape their tumultuous lives. “The Runaways” has been accepted into the Roxbury International Film Festival, and is under consideration for festivals throughout 2019 and 2020.

Mr. Ortiz is currently in production on his second documentary, “Higher Power.” This documentary will highlight cannabis legalization efforts in the District of Columbia and how it is impacting African Americans in the Washington Metropolitan area.
