A tenant has a right to make reasonable modifications to the apartment or common areas at their own expense.

The landlord must allow these modifications, but is not responsible for paying for them. It is the tenant’s responsibility to return the apartment to its original condition when moving out. A landlord must also make reasonable exceptions to the building rules, such as allowing a utility dog when pets are otherwise not permitted.

How Does the Fair Housing Act Protect Families With Children?

Fair Housing laws give families with children under age 18 specific protection from discrimination in housing.

"Families with children under 18" include:

- Children living with legal custodians or an adult designated to care for the children
- Pregnant women
- People in the process of securing custody of children, such as adoption

In addition to other protections provided by the federal Fair Housing Act it is illegal to:

- Refuse to rent or sell a home or apartment to a family because they have children
- Require an additional security deposit or fee for families with children that is not required of other residents of the apartment, condominium, mobile home park, etc.
- Segregate families with children to certain areas of a housing complex, mobile home park, etc.
- Limit the use of the housing complex's pools, elevators and other services to adults only, although reasonable safety rules are permissible
- Evict a family after a baby is born or adopted unless legal occupancy requirements are violated
When Can Families With Children Be Excluded From Housing?

Fair Housing laws allow "housing for older persons" to exclude families with children.

"Housing for older persons" is strictly defined:

- All the people living in the housing complex, including both spouses, must be 62 and over or
- 80% of all the units in a complex must be occupied by at least one person age 55 or older; or
- The housing has been funded "for older persons" by the state or federal government

How Do Fair Housing Laws Protect Against Discrimination Based Upon Your Sex?

The law says that sellers, landlord’s, homeowners’ associations, real estate agents, etc. may not decide where you will be able to live based on gender.

In addition to the general protection provided by the Fair Housing Act, it is illegal to:

- Rent, sell or negotiate for housing with women on a different basis than men
- Refuse to acknowledge as income any documented alimony or child support payments received by a divorced or unmarried woman or man
- Require, directly or by implication, sexual favors in exchange for housing or real estate related transactions
- Sexually harass home or apartment purchasers or tenants

Specific to Mortgages

If you're buying a home, when it comes time to arrange your Mortgage it is against the law for a lender to:

- Refuse to take your mortgage application
- Fail to provide information about loans
- Set different terms on the loan, such as higher Interest rate or extra fees
- Discriminate in appraising a property's value

Housing Discrimination on the Basis of Lawful Source of Income

The New York State Human Rights Law was amended, effective April 12, 2019, to protect those who rely on any lawful source of income from discrimination in housing.

What sources of income are protected?

Lawful sources of income include, but are not limited to:

- child support
- alimony or spousal maintenance
- foster care subsidies
- social security benefits
- federal, state, or local public assistance
- federal, state, or local housing assistance
- any other form of lawful income

Housing assistance includes Section 8 or any other type of vouchers, or any other form of housing assistance, regardless of whether paid to the tenant or the landlord.

Discrimination based on race, color, age, sex, national origin, marital status, religion, sexual orientation, military status, disability, income, familial status, or victim of domestic or dating violence is illegal.
