This one hour webinar will involve a review of this new paper examining the use of MIS in the setting of the coronavirus pandemic. Using the User’s Guide to the Medical Literature: Clinical Practice Guidelines as the methodologic framework from which to review this paper, the expert reviewers will review this paper and assess the recommendations made by the paper along with the validity of these recommendations. This discussion will occur in the context of a pragmatic real-world scenario, including health systems experiencing resource scarcity. After the review, questions will be fielded from the audience. Participants will be able to state whether the guidelines are whether or not they are valid in various clinical practice scenarios.
