The Japan SDGs Award
The Japan SDGs Award was established by “SDGs (Sustainable Development Goals) Promotion Headquarters,” which is headed by the Prime Minister and comprises all cabinet ministers. The awards recognize outstanding efforts by companies and other organizations toward achieving one or more of 17 areas of the SDGs established by the United Nations in 2015. TFT’s ONIGIRI ACTION campaign has delivered 4.5 million school meals to children in need since its launch five years ago. The “Deputy-chiefs’ Award (by Foreign Minister)” recognizes ONIGIRI ACTION as one of the most outstanding initiatives that anyone can casually join, thus making a global impact involving numerous partners and supporters.

The Health and Culture Award
The Health and Culture Award was established in 1950 in Japan to recognize organizations and individuals who have been continuously working to improve health conditions. Recently more award recipients who focus on issues such as lifestyle-related disease control, overseas medical care, and the welfare of the elderly and disabled have been selected. TFT’s activities are highly valued as we have contributed to increasing nutritional and educational opportunities, which promote healthy diets and obesity prevention.

Mayumi Uejima-Carr, President of TABLE FOR TWO USA, commented:
