The 19th Amendment

ABOUT

The Women's Suffrage Centennial Commission (WSCC) was formed by Congress to commemorate the 100th anniversary of women's right to vote and the 19th Amendment.

Throughout 2020, the United States is celebrating the centennial of the ratification of the 19th Amendment, which secured women's constitutional right to vote. Today, more than 68 million American women vote in elections because of the courageous suffragists who never gave up the fight for equality. This centennial is an unparalleled opportunity to elevate women's history and to commemorate a milestone of American democracy.

Use this toolkit as your guide to commemorating the centennial in your state and community.

LEARN THE HISTORY

THE WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT

Suffragists began their organized fight for women's equality in 1848 when they demanded the right to vote during the first women's rights convention in Seneca Falls, New York. For the next 72 years, women leaders lobbied, marched, picketed, and protested for the right to the ballot. The U.S. House of Representatives finally approved the "Susan B. Anthony Amendment," which guaranteed women the right to vote, on May 21, 1919. The U.S. Senate followed two weeks later and voted to approve the 19th Amendment on June 4, 1919. The 19th Amendment then went to the states, where it had to be ratified by three-fourths of the then 48 states to be added to the Constitution. Tennessee became the 36th and final state needed to ratify the 19th Amendment on August 18, 1920. On August 26, 1920, the U.S. Secretary of State issued a proclamation declaring the 19th Amendment ratified and officially part of the U.S. Constitution. Today, August 26th is celebrated annually as Women's Equality Day.

MICHIGAN AND THE 19TH AMENDMENT

RATIFICATION DATE: JUNE 10, 1919

Women first organized and collectively fought for suffrage at the national level in July of 1848. Suffragists such as Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott convened a meeting of over 300 people in Seneca Falls, New York. In the following decades, women marched, protested, lobbied, and even went to jail. By the 1870s, women pressured Congress to vote on an amendment that would recognize their suffrage rights. This amendment was sometimes known as the Susan B. Anthony Amendment and became the 19th Amendment.

The amendment reads:

"The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

Although progress on the federal amendment stalled, women also campaigned for changes to state suffrage requirements to win the vote. In Michigan, women petitioned the legislature for the ballot as early as 1855. After the Civil War, women won limited school board suffrage. Suffragists continually fought for expanded voting rights but saw repeated state constitutional amendments and ballot initiatives defeated over the next decades. Groups like the Michigan State Suffrage Association in Battle Creek and the Michigan Equal Suffrage Association in Flint held rallies and gave lectures about the importance of women's suffrage. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, who grew up in Michigan and was the first woman ordained as a Methodist minister, became president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association in 1904. Many Michigan women expanded their efforts to include national as well as statewide suffrage efforts. After years of activism, the women of Michigan won the vote in 1918 through a state constitutional amendment.

The next year, Congress finally passed the 19th Amendment in 1919. After Congress approved the Amendment, at least 36 states needed to vote in favor of it for the amendment to become part of the U.S. Constitution. This process is called ratification.

Michigan became one of the first states to ratify the amendment on June 10, 1919. It passed unanimously.

By August of 1920, 36 states (including Michigan) had ratified the amendment, recognizing women's suffrage rights.

Michigan Places of Women's Suffrage: State Capitol Building

Michigan women fought for the right to vote decades before the passage of the 19th Amendment. They formed suffrage organizations in towns and cities across the state, from Battle Creek to Flint. They also pressured politicians to hold a constitutional convention in 1908. Politicians debated on whether to change the state constitution to include women's voting rights. That January, suffragists gathered at the State Capitol Building in Lansing. They made arguments for their suffrage rights in front of the constitutional convention delegates.

After women won the vote, Michigan women served in the State Capitol as well. Eva McCall Hamilton was elected to the state senate in 1920. Her work as a Senator included advocacy for women and children, work she continued after she finished her term and joined the Michigan League of Women Voters. Cora Reynolds Anderson was the first woman elected to the Michigan House of Representatives in 1925. The first Native American woman to serve in the Michigan legislature, Anderson focused on public health issues during her term. The State Capitol Building is designated a National Historic Landmark and is open for public tours.
