Vivek Shah is originally from Houston and now lives in San Francisco with his wife and children. Vivek loves anything that involves sports, adventures and learning. He is particularly fascinated by understanding human potential and inspiring those to help reach their maximum potential. He especially loves spending time with his family and particularly his young kids as they seem to be growing up too quickly in his eyes!

“It is interesting to think about our beginnings. None of us chose when to be born, where to be born, or whom to be born to. From our genetic makeup, to our upbringing to our genders, there are infinite factors that we never have the luxury of choosing at birth. With that in mind, both men and women that begin as beautiful children should always foster love, nurture and compassion to all humanity regardless of one’s past or current circumstance and particularly one's gender.

This extends to both men and women caring for one another and supporting those that are suffering. Sadly, violence against women continues today and both men and women should unify to bring awareness and put an end to such treatment. We shall never forget that we were all brought into this world by our mothers who sacrificed so much for us. Women are our mothers, our daughters, our sisters and should be respected, loved and cared for at the highest levels.

Let’s all join together to speak up and ensure women that are suffering have a voice, a channel, an outlet and a solution so that they can be free, empowered and fulfilled as every human should have that right. It is our responsibility and duty to ensure every woman may reach her maximum potential.”