April is Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month (#SAAM)! This month we want to restate the fact that we all have a role to play to address and end sexual violence and abuse. We must identify that war, political insurgence, and mass displacement of people can create dangerous conditions for sexual assault, abuse and exploitation especially for women and girls. Not only in war zones, many women are facing sexual abuse and violence in their own homes as marital rape is a shocking reality. Sexual assault is also pervasive in college campuses and in work places. In this digital age, perpetrators are increasingly using online technologies to monitor, threaten and humiliate their victims along with in-person assaults. In this #SAAM, let's join hands in ending sexual violence and all other forms of violence against women. Please support survivors to heal, advocate for right policies to amplify victims’ voices in receiving justice, and take part in creating a safe, respectful and inclusive society for all.

MAITRI TURNED 31

From its humble beginning in 1991, with a single phone line on a kitchen table, Maitri has indeed traversed an admirable and arduous journey picking up new learnings and new accomplishments along the way. From a state of near obscurity at the beginning to becoming a robust and trusted agency in the South Asian community, Maitri has reinvented itself multiple ways, in tune with changing times and sensibilities. Unending community support and trust bestowed upon Maitri is a catalyst for the agency’s zest to run groundbreaking programs, take an active role in policy advocacy to support immigrant survivors and engage community members in ending domestic violence. In Feb, Maitri staff and volunteers celebrated Maitri’s inception once again with pride and joy.

WORKSHOP FOR SURVIVORS

Maitri’s Career Readiness workshop series in March served 15 survivors by laying groundwork to re-enter/ transition and begin their journey into the workforce. The workshops were facilitated remotely with an emphasis on interactive learning and group activities. The participants shared that they felt comfortable in the space and the content was relevant. The workshops resonated well with the participants. One of the participants shared that her time in the workshop series made her feel that confidence can be cultivated with small, steady steps and finance is not scary. Another participant said "joining a cohort and re-establishing a work atmosphere" were takeaways for her.

We attended multiple platforms to have dialogue with community members in preventing domestic violence and abuse. Suggestions were exchanged on addressing and ending discriminations. Watch the panel video.

PREVENTION TALKS

We provided interactive sessions to educate students about identifying the red flags in a toxic partner relationship and the importance of building healthy partner relationships. Nandini Ray, Manager of Outreach, Prevention & Policy advocacy, provided presentations at the Stanford Listen to the Silence Conference, Ohana night at the Northern Illinois University, and at the Gunn High School student assembly. Nandini also shared an overview of the Maitri's prevention program at the CPEDV regional meeting to inform about the program’s growth to all our sister agencies.
