

Coping with transition/change

A change is when something different happens. Changes can be Positive or negative

Positive changes

Getting a McDonalds for dinner

Getting a new phone

Extra time in bed

Negative changes

Doing a class test

Going somewhere new

Things taking longer

Some changes are expected. We know they are going to happen

Christmas

Summer time

Lunch at school

Some expected changes we like and some we don't like. What expected changes do you like and not like?

Like

Don't like

Some changes are un-expected. We don't know they are going to happen

The weather

WI-FI going off

A substitute teacher

Un-expected changes are harder to cope with. We don't know they are going to happen and we might not be ready for a change. What unexpected changes do you like and not like?

Dealing with any change can be hard. It might make you upset and confused. It might make you worried because you don't know what will happen next

When a change or transition happens it means you might have to Move your body to another place/activity

Move your brain to think about something else

Moving your body and brain to a different place or activity can be hard

Sometimes change means moving your body from _____ to

Sometimes change means moving your brain from _____ to

When you try and refuse changes sometimes this creates more trouble for you and other people around you. Lots of times there wont be a choice when change happens. It just has to happen

Most people don't enjoy change but most people know change just happens, there will always be changes, some changes are big or small, some changes are ones we like and ones we don't like.

Coping with change is part of growing up

Things that can help you cope with changes are

Practice!

Use a daily planner/schedule and get a parent to put a ? Mark on it sometimes, this means what will happen will be a surprise or change. This will help you to start practising coping with small changes first

Write/draw

If your brain finds it hard to move to the next activity because you think you might forget what you were doing, use coloured post it notes, the note section in your phone or take a picture

Think Positive

Remember not all change is bad or something you won't like, just focus on moving your body and brain to the next thing or place. If it helps use positive statements. 'I can deal with this' or 'change is only for a short time'

Use Calming strategies

Breathing in and out helps to stop your brain thinking everything is so scary. It helps to relax you. You can use other things that help to calm you as well.

Every time you deal with a change you are helping to retrain your brain to become better at coping with change. Reward yourself, this is hard work you are doing! It could be something small like a break when you have time or listening to your favourite song.
