THE CHALLENGE

Ensuring all students, whether entering the workforce or pursuing post-secondary education, are equipped for success takes creativity and commitment in a rural community. School and community leaders in Estes Park, Colorado, recently tackled this challenge head-on to help their students be as successful as possible upon graduation from high school.

BACKGROUND

Estes Park school-board members, teachers, students, parents, and community leaders started an open and honest dialogue on the topic of college and career readiness. What skills are valued as necessary for students leaving high school? Where was there room for growth and improvement with current graduates? Throughout all the conversations, key themes emerged for school leaders that became the district’s global outcomes and skill development goals for students: critical thinking and problem solving, communication, collaboration, creativity, perseverance, global awareness, and compassion. For this dedicated community, reaching those goals meant that teaching and learning needed to be personalized, with more student involvement. Increasing student choice and voice and ownership of learning became a key focus for classroom teachers, principals, and district leadership.
THE SOLUTION

That’s where the partnership with TeachUNITED® began. In order to make learning more personalized, Estes Park needed coaching and professional learning for support on their journey to make teaching (and ultimately learning) more personalized for students. A positive partnership with TeachUNITED and the School Accelerator Program grew participation from five teachers to nearly triple that in two years. Training started with lead teachers at both the Middle and High School in the district to build strategies, knowledge, and skill in the identified areas. Those individuals are now serving to sustain the change by leading teams of teachers in each building.

“By first training our leaders, we can build that leadership capacity to spread... building a collective efficacy surrounding our global outcomes and personalized learning in our schools”

- Ruby Bode, Assistant Superintendent, Estes Park School District R-3
