Diversity and Cultural Engagement is seeking a Center Director for the Kaku-Ixt Mana Ina Haws. This is a full-time, 12-month, professional faculty position.

The Kaku-Ixt Mana Ina Haws (Ina Haws) represents the Indigenous people of the Americas and Pacific Islands. We strive to deconstruct colonial borders’ impact on Indigenous identities while also honoring the sovereignty of Tribes. While protecting and preserving the rights of Indigenous people, we provide a sense of home/community for Indigenous students that helps preserve their Indigenous identities while in college. The Ina Haws provides a source of support honoring the cultures of the first people of these lands and waters. We also provide educational opportunities to educate all about the region's Tribes.

The Ina Haws prides itself in being a brave space where Indigenous students can be in community and express their culture. Events are held in fall, winter, and spring terms that highlight Indigenous history, culture, and current issues that also help give the broader campus community more understanding about Indigenous people. We always recognize and give thanks to the Kalapuya people on whose land OSU resides.

We sincerely appreciate assistance in getting the word out about this position!
