Spring Peak Fire Threatens Bodie & Aurora

by Terri Geissinger, Bodie Historian and Guide

On August 17th, a wildfire broke out in the dry hills just above the historic site of Aurora. The area had experienced a lively thunderstorm with several lightning strikes just hours before. The combination of high winds and low humidity fueled this fire until it grew into a fast-moving blaze with Bodie in its path. The black smoke plume could be seen from miles away and it sent panic through the local communities.

Within hours the initial attack crews were overwhelmed and an incident command team (headed by Mike Brown) was mobilized. The command center was set up in Bridgeport. Within 24 hours, the command post was in full swing. The fire camp was made up of special hi-tech trailers, a large mobile kitchen, fire engines, crew buggies, tents, tarps, shower stalls and sani huts.

Strike teams and hand crews arrived with names like Slide Crew, Silver State, Grizzly, MQ Franko, Califire, North Lake Tahoe Fire - the list goes on and on. Bodie was closed for two days for public safety and to help keep the roads clear of traffic.

During the peak danger, 10 hand crews, over 400 firefighters, 18 engines, 3 water tenders, 3 bulldozers, 2 helicopters and 6 air tankers were fighting this blaze. The number one objective was to

The Spring Peak fire came within three miles of Bodie. It started less than a week after FOB Day from a lightning strike. The park was closed down for two days for safety precautions and to allow fire crews and equipment easier access.

W. S. Bodey’s Long-Lost Grave Sniffed Out?

by Terri Geissinger, Bodie Historian and Guide

Some exciting news was created by the ICF dogs! On top of Foundry Hill, all six dogs have alerted at the possible gravesite of W. S. Bodey! We have recently discovered several articles that described the actual ‘site’ of Mr. Bodey’s internment. While looking for a possible site, we came across an area that had been disturbed. The dogs have now confirmed that it is indeed a grave! We won’t be able to prove

Please see BODEY, page 11

All six ICF dogs alerted (by sitting down, which is their alert signal) on this site on top of Foundry Hill. We think it is possibly the final resting place of W. S. Bodey. The six headstones of the Scanavino family plot in the Bodie cemetery can be seen in the distant background.
Volunteers Help Visitors Enjoy Another Season at Mono Lake

by Janet Carle, Mono Lake Volunteer Coordinator

More than 50 volunteers helped visitors enjoy their experience at Mono Lake this season. They guided tours, answered questions at the lakeshore, helped out at the Scenic Area Visitor Center, staffed special events, assisted research scientists removing invasive plants and brushed trails. Now in its 10th season, the Mono Lake Volunteer program is more important than ever as agency budgets shrink.

Volunteers make it possible to maintain a high quality experience for Mono’s visitors from around the world. Funding from the Eastern Sierra Interpretive Association, the Mono Lake Committee and the Bodie Foundation provides training and support. Participants are locals, second home owners, and people from farther away that love the Mono Basin. Volunteers donated over 1800 hours on education and stewardship this season, which is a huge contribution to the local economy. The Mono Lake Volunteer program was sparked by a grant the Mono Lake Committee received in 2003. Ten years later, partnerships continue to create unique synergy for this program.

Volunteers can mix and match their volunteer hours, depending on their interests, working in the State Reserve, the Mono Basin National Forest Scenic Area, or the Mono Lake Committee Information Center. Staff members from contributing organizations help with supervision and coordination. Six half days of training are held each spring. Training is done by staff and experienced volunteers, and is open to all new staff members as well. When the Mono Lake Tufa Site and Visitors Center reopens on May 2, 2014, it will feature a new interactive display developed by the Tufa Collaborative. The new display will provide information about the visitors center, the Tufa, and the Mono Basin. The new display will also feature interactive exhibits that allow visitors to learn about the history and science of the Mono Basin.

Josh Heitzmann is the new Supervising Ranger for Bodie. Josh is most recently from Anza Borrego State Park and started in Bodie the week after FOB day. He was immediately “baptized under fire” (literally), having to deal with all the excitement that the Spring Mountain fire created days after he started his new position.

Terra Woodall has also joined the Bodie Ranger staff. Terra completed Ranger school earlier this year and started her assignment in Bodie in early September. Prior to Ranger school, Terra was a park aide in Bodie for several seasons. She is married to Matthew “Woody” Woodall of the Bodie maintenance team.

Sterl Cogan is the new maintenance manager. Sterl has his hands full as he will be in charge of both Bodie and Grover Hot Springs State Parks.

Ranger Ryan Randar has accepted a position at Lake Tahoe. Park aide and artifacts assessing support Jenna Nustad will follow Ryan to Lake Tahoe District. This leaves a position open for anyone interested. Contact Ranger Josh Heitzmann if you are interested in this position.

Brenda Hemand, previous Bodie maintenance supervisor, has transferred to Anza Borrego State Park. We would like to thank Ryan, Brenda and Jenna for their committed stewardship in Bodie.

Bodie Volunteers have Diverse Skills
by Helene Frakes,
Bodie Volunteer

Most dictionaries define a volunteer as a person who freely offers to take part in an enterprise or undertake a task, or a person who works for an organization without being paid. That’s pretty dry and hardly does justice to the wonderful experience that is being a Bodie volunteer.

I’m one of 16 or so Bodie volunteers and want to let you in on what we do, hoping that you will consider becoming a Bodie volunteer too.

Some of us work in public contact and others repair buildings and structures in the park. All of us have a great time. Everything we do complements and extends the functions of State employees. So what exactly do we do anyway? It depends on our talents, interests and time, which is part of the beauty of being a Bodie volunteer.

Like to show people around and learn new things?

We give history talks and stamp mill tours. Love to be looked up to as an expert? Just walk around and answer our visitors’ questions, from the ever popular, “Where are the bathrooms?” to the observant, “Why are there 4 power lines going to the James Cain house and is that thing a transformer?” to the constant, “Why did they leave so much stuff?”

Speak a foreign language, especially French or German?

If you do, you are a gem and all would welcome you. Bodie is not an easy place for our foreign visitors to understand. If you can answer our visitors in their own language, imagine how richer their visit will be. Many of our visitors are from Europe and very different cultural traditions. Just by being volunteers, we represent the strong American trait of helping others who we don’t know.

Like to use your senses and intuitions?

Walk around the park “patrolling” and be on the lookout for people who are where they shouldn’t be, for people picking up rocks and nails and for visitors who may need assistance or directions. Lend out our special wheelchair with balloon tires to those who would have a hard time negotiating the uneven dirt roads. Keep an eye on large school groups. Gently ask the parents of the little tyke who just put a rock in his pocket to talk with him and explain that the park is an outdoor museum.

Like to plan and give parties?

Like to dress up in period costume from another era? Many volunteers are needed to plan and staff Friends of Bodie Day. It is short-term and an ideal way to get a taste of volunteering at Bodie.

Like dogs?

Yes, we have lots of dogs visiting the park with their owners. Showing owners where the dog water bowls are and where the water fountain is located is a kindness to both dogs and their owners. You will also have the opportunity to meet dozens of dogs named “Bodie”.

Have you ever wanted to be part of a real museum?

Helping out in the museum when it is real busy, covering for a lunch break, or just answering visitors’ questions can really enrich our visitors experience. Pointing out an artifact to someone who asks a question will bring the answer alive.

The visitors teach you too.

One afternoon in the museum, an elderly gentleman who had been in the Forest Service in the 50’s, recounted to me how he’d been out at Aurora and watched as a used brick contractor hired local people to dismantle the beautiful old buildings, chip the mortar off the bricks and pile them onto flatbeds.
State Reserve was threatened with closure recently, volunteers rallied to secure funding and support the Reserve’s importance to the local recreation-based economy. An active volunteer program (and major help with revenue generation from the Bodie Foundation) helped keep the Reserve open for business.

The Mono Basin has always been a place where partnerships and collaboration are critical.

The land management agencies, California State Parks and the Inyo National Forest have worked together from the beginning. The Basin is extremely lucky to have three effective non-profit agencies, the Mono Lake Committee, the Bodie Foundation and the Eastern Sierra Interpretive Association, who have supported the volunteer program with enthusiasm.

Thank you, Bodie Foundation, for your continuing support -- visitors from around the world are enjoying their Mono Lake experience!

Contact Dani Williams, our Bodie Foundation Business Manager, (760) 647-6564 (dani@bodiefoundation.org) if you are interested in volunteer service at any of the three State Parks supported by the Bodie Foundation.
trucks on their way to southern California, where the bricks were to be sold. That is why Aurora looks like vandals pillaged it!

Like to work with children?

You might want to help with the Junior Ranger program. Youngsters discover and fill out the answers to questions about Bodie in a booklet and bring them back to the museum. After checking the answers, you can award the child with a Junior Ranger badge and announce their accomplishment to all in the museum. Children are the future stewards of our parks and historic sites. Each child who connects with Bodie is a vital treasure.

Not so much interested in working with people?

How about volunteering your hands and your construction experience? Volunteers repair and replace roofing, doors, windows, foundations, fences and sidings of structures under the guidance of state park maintenance workers. What a wonderful gift to be able to help arrest the decay of our buildings.

Each of us volunteers has many stories of interesting visitors we’ve met, tales we’ve been told, genealogies that have been shared with us, and, of course, the opportunity to make Bodie come alive for our visitors. Volunteering in Bodie helps our visitors have the best possible experience and memories, whether we are pointing out a mother sage hen shepherding her little brood of chicks down the creek, or give context to the legend of a bad, bawdy and dangerous Bodie. Bodie beckons...will you answer?
Bodie Foundation Mourns

Joan Dillard

It is with regret that we say goodbye to a dear Friend of Bodie, Joan Dillard. Joan was the granddaughter of Catherine Holland, who lived in Bodie most of her life. Joan was very active in her genealogy and was very proud of her Bodie heritage.

She volunteered in the Bodie Foundation booths at July 4th celebrations and on FOB day for several years. You may remember her as the little lady in the cowgirl hat wearing her ‘Bodie’ earrings and necklace very proudly. She will be missed.

Grover Volunteers Help Park Run Smoothly

By Liz Ballou, Bodie Foundation Visitor Center Staff

Volunteers “really do make a difference” in today’s economically strapped world. Volunteers within the California State Parks system provide much needed relief to maintain continual operation of programs offered to their visitors. With nearly 300 parks, the State of California is indebted to camp hosts, visitor center guides and junior ranger program leaders who donate their time and efforts to keep things running smoothly.

Grover Hot Springs State Park, located four short miles up Hot Springs Road outside the picturesque town of Markleeville, relies upon two teams of camp hosts. I had the pleasure of interviewing one of those teams to find out just what makes one become a volunteer camp host.

Wayne and Karen Halladay are retired school teachers with a wealth of knowledge.

The host was unable to work, so the Halladays took over and worked four days on and four days off to finish up the season. This was no small task because the Sunset campground has over 500 campsites. It wasn’t long before the desert landscape felt like home. In fact, Karen ended, they were asked to take over for the winter at the Sunset campground in Death Valley National Park. That was three years ago when the then-current camp host had sustained a very serious injury.

Telling Stories of Bodie’s Women

By Robin DeRosa, Ph.D., Bodie Volunteer

Last summer, my family and I first drove the Bodie road. We were, like most folks who come to Bodie, just regular tourists, excited to visit our first ghost town and maybe learn a bit about the old mining days. We all fell in love with the place. My husband, Phil, who is a sculpture professor, was intrigued with the mining machinery and the colors of the wooden buildings against the brown-green sage and the blue sky.

Our daughter, Ruby, amassed new patches and pins as she completed the Junior Ranger program. And I, a professor of early American literature and history, was mesmerized by the stories the Rangers and aides told about Bodie’s boom years.

When we returned home to New Hampshire, I began to really explore Bodie’s history, reading everything I could get my hands on about mining, camptown life, and the conflicts between cultures that came into contact as the old west succumbed to gold fever.

I was especially intrigued by the stories of women. During my Bodie visit, I had learned so much about the stamp mill, about W. S. Bodey and Black Taylor, about the boom and bust that filled and then emptied the town.

But I hadn’t heard much about the women. Most of us know that the ratio of men to women in old mining towns like Bodie was radically skewed, but certainly there were women here, and it was their stories that I most actively tried to seek out.

It occurred to me that perhaps I had a contribution to make to the State Park with which I was now so smitten. I contacted the Bodie Foundation, and proposed that I create a small, self-guided tour so that as they walk the dusty roads of Main Street or Bonanza Street, future visitors to Bodie would be able hear the voices of Bodie’s women.

The Foundation, current Bodie staff and volunteers, and the State Park system of California were generous enough to grant my family and I access to Bodie this summer as I worked on the project, and my home university, Plymouth State University in New Hampshire, was generous enough to fund my travel.

And so once again, my family and I found ourselves traveling the notorious Bodie road, on an extended adventure to unearth the stories of Bodie’s women; the famous, the infamous, and the near-forgotten.

The plan is for a booklet to be available beginning next summer, so that visitors can trace a path through the lives of the businesswomen, teachers, prostitutes, wives and mothers who helped guide Bodie through its history.

I was impressed and amazed by what I learned of Bodie’s strong and resourceful women, and I can’t wait to share these stories with the next generations of visitors ready to fall in love with Bodie!
Volunteers Make Gifts of Time, Energy at Bodie

by Chris Spiller, Volunteer Coordinator

Those who treasure their visits to our California State Parks often wonder what they can do to help in tough budget times. Of course, money is always welcome, but another valuable contribution is the gift of your time and energy at Bodie State Historic Park.

As a volunteer you can help preserve and protect Bodie for future generations in a variety of ways:

- Lead tours of the stamp mill and conduct history talks.
- Having volunteers available to augment the staff’s talks enables more visitors to attend tours and gain in-depth knowledge of the park’s history and the people of the past.
- Perform “roving interpretation.” This is patrolling the park talking to visitors one-on-one, answering questions and informing them of park activities and features.

  Sprechen Sie Deutsch? Parlez-vous Français?

  If you speak another language, Bodie’s many international visitors will be better served by being able to ask questions in their native language.
- Be eyes and ears in the 1,015 acre park by alerting rangers to potential theft or vandalism of park artifacts and other violations (smoking in the park or dogs off leash are just a couple of examples).
- If you have construction skills, help park maintenance workers stabilize Bodie’s historic structures.
- Help the Bodie Foundation and park staff at special events: you can wear period attire and help with the special evening entertainment for FOB night.
- Tired of all that walking at 8400 feet? Take a break in the office and help with Bodie Foundation and park projects, research and other administrative tasks. Or, help in the Bodie Foundation store in the museum. You can also help answer questions in the museum and check in/out children participating in the Junior ranger program.

No doubt part of the album's success was attributed to "Bodie magic".

All volunteers must attend a two-day training session. The first session is on a Saturday in mid to late September and the second session is the Friday of Memorial Day weekend the following May. At training, volunteers receive a training manual, learn how to organize and present a talk, find out about the types of questions visitors ask and learn about State Park operations and policies.

After donating 50 hours a year, volunteers receive a one-year pass for day use to all Sierra District State Parks. After donating 200 hours, a pass is issued for free day-use to all California State Parks for the following year.

Bodie is open year-round, even if they have 5 feet of snow on the ground! Highway 270 may be closed, but the park is open. You’ll have to either cross-country ski in or ride snowmobiles into the park if there is meaningful snow accumulation. Always check with CalTrans or call the park at 760.647.6554 for current road conditions before planning a winter trip to Bodie and come prepared for severe winter weather. On November 1st, winter park hours will go into effect, which are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Hours will revert back to summer hours on May 14, 2014, which are 9 a.m. until 6 p.m.

Bodie always has had to deal with severe weather. For 2013, the warmest day was July 2nd, reaching 88 degrees. The coldest day was, ironically, January 1st with a temperature reading of –27 degrees, which does not include wind chill! Wind chill (the perceived decrease in temperature due to the flow of cold air) in Bodie makes the air feel 20 to 40 degrees cooler, depending on the amount of wind. January 1st also was the record for most snowfall in one day – 23 inches. The August 20th rainfall amount of .6 inches was the highest one-day rainfall total for 2013. This occurred during the Spring Peak fire, which was a blessing to many.

We would like to apologize to Lori Hibbett for using her incorrect first name. She is identified as “Leslie Hibbett” on our 2014 calendar contest photo winner for August. Lori, we regret and apologize for the mistake.

Also, we received feedback from an astute member correcting us on our last Bodie Fun Fact from the Spring, 2013 edition. We referred to mixed bars of ingots and this term is not correct. The correct term is bullion. While both terms are synonymous, literature of that period only used ‘bullion’, not ‘ingot’. Michael, we thank you for catching this and bringing it to our attention.

We welcome all feedback regarding the newsletter and the editor can be contacted at DaveJ@BodieFoundation.org. Also, all general inquiries can be sent to Info@BodieFoundation.org.

A big warm and fuzzy “Thank You” goes out to the Institute for Canine Forensics (ICF) team for their work in late September in our cemeteries. Two cold and windy days were spent searching for human remains in unmarked graves. Although we are waiting for the official report, the dogs alerted on over 70 possible gravesites. We will have more detailed information in our Spring 2014 newsletter.

Helping Junior Rangers Earn Their Badges

By Lu Weaver, Junior Ranger Volunteer Facilitator

Lu Weaver poses with Junior Ranger program literature.

Editor’s Note: If you are interested in volunteering for this program, or any other volunteer activities, please contact the Bodie Foundation business Office @ 760.647.6564 or email us at info@BodieFoundation.org.

When you volunteer for a job, you usually want to be sure it’s worthwhile and worth the trip on “that road”. Being a Junior Ranger Program facilitator is definitely a job that’s worthwhile. You can see the dawn of understanding when the children realize what life in Bodie was like and how mining boom towns worked. As a facilitator, you can relate lesser known tidbits which make life in Bodie more real. It is a bonus to see the parents learning too!

Some children take being a Ranger quite seriously. One wanted to know where the meetings were held, and one little boy wondered when he’d get his gun!

On the days when a facilitator is present, there are more Junior Rangers who earn their badge. The regular museum staff often does not have extra time to devote to this program. They are busy answering questions or tending the store for the Foundation. How wonderful it would be to have a Junior Ranger facilitator every day! It’s also good PR.

As a Bodie volunteer, you meet people from all over the world. Often European parents will translate the Junior Ranger questions so their children can participate. The Junior Ranger facilitator gets lots of “thank yous”, which make it all worthwhile.

FOB Day 2013 Displays Diverse Conveyances

Ted Holloway and crew provide wagon rides for visitors during FOB Day. Due to the large attendance, visitors had to park some distance from town. Ted and his rig provided a bit of welcome relief shuttling folks back and forth.

The Sagebrush chapter of the Model T Club of America, based in Carson City, also returned to FOB Day. The vintage flivvers were driven (not trailered) into Bodie.
