“Change” is a word that elicits many emotions: anticipation, enthusiasm, fear, confusion, etc. STEPS has experienced a great deal of change this past year, some necessitated by external forces and some driven by STEPS.

One CHANGE that was STEPS led included our image, logo and brand. Many of you have known and supported our organization for many years. Your support provided jobs for adults with disabilities and that will continue to be a cornerstone of our services. However, STEPS is now so much more. And to visually communicate that CHANGE, our Board of Directors decided it was time for a “rebranding.” I hope you like our new logo and tag line, “Moving Lives Forward.” Thanks to Letterpress Communications for shepherding this rebranding effort.

At times it must have felt like “herding cats!”

But CHANGE at STEPS has an even deeper meaning ... it means a new way to serve our region and its citizens in a more impactful way. Throughout this annual report, you will read stories of just how CHANGE at STEPS is playing a critical role in providing opportunities for children, adults, families and our communities.

We sincerely appreciate your support ... please follow our continuously CHANGING story ... without you, it would not be possible.

Partnership Helps Children By STEAMing Ahead

Ask ten-year-old De’Alonzo Walker about his summer and you’ll likely see an excitement on his face beyond the normally beaming smile. It also flares though as his words pop in rapid fire.

“I would say that was the best three weeks of my life,” exudes the Prince Edward County youth.

That’s says a lot, considering he sacrificed coveted summer vacation days. What student wants to give up summer vacation for more school? De’Alonzo for one.

The Summer STEAM Health Lab grew out of a broader planning collaboration around building a “Culture of Health” in Farmville, Prince Edward and surrounding Southside counties. Richmond-based MB2 Solutions, a domestic public policy strategy firm, and STEPS, Inc., the designated community action agency for a 6-county region of Southside, were project partners. Centra Health contributed funding for the project, enabling students to participate on full scholarship. “We’re pleased to be able to support this unique public-private partnership in summer STEAM enrichment, and to provide young people in our region with an opportunity to explore STEAM fields and learn about careers in health care and health sciences,” stated E.W. Tibbs, President & CEO of Centra Health at that time. Additional in-kind support was provided by Kenston Forest School, Longwood University, Pitsco Education and STEPS. Participating public school divisions provided transportation for their students. Sharon Harrup, President and CEO of STEPS, Inc., and a member of the Centra Health Board of Directors, stated: “As the leader of a regional nonprofit with pillars of service in Workforce Development and Education, it’s a privilege to be a part of an initiative that provides students in our region with an opportunity to connect their work in the classroom with careers in health care and health sciences.”

Eighteen Southside Virginia public school rising sixth graders were chosen to participate in the public-private partnership, STEAM Health Lab. STEAM, for the acronymly challenged, stands for Science, Technology, Engineering, Arts and Mathematics.

Boring stuff? Not hardly. Children from Cumberland, Nottoway, Mecklenburg and Prince Edward had the opportunity to learn in a fun, exciting way. They learned about anatomy, physiology, health and nutrition, ecology and the environment in the classroom and through field experiences at Centra Southside Community Hospital, and the Edward I. Gordon Clinical Simulation Learning Center at Longwood University.

They studied bones, made a 15-piece skeleton, used a three-dimensional computer to see the impact running has on the heart, dissected the parts of a building, and studied the life cycle of a butterfly. They assembled a simulated robot hand, tested what was growing on the bottom of their shoe, and worked with a mannequin used to train University students.

Fun, learning exercises. And, possibly, life-changing opportunities for children who will grow, learn and become leaders in the next generation. Which is appreciated.

“I like the fact that it was children from different counties being able to get together ... ,” De’Alonzo’s mom, Shatina Ford, said. “That was my main thing. And ... the fact that he now knows what he wants to do when he grows up. Like, he had an idea (to play baseball), but now he has a plan ‘B.’ Cardiologist.

Well, at least that’s what he’s telling his mom.
If there’s one important tip to fashion, it’s to always stay on the cutting edge of fun!

STEPS’ Head Start celebrated a youthful fashion in a special event at the Firemen’s Sports Arena April 7, 2018. Pre-school age children enjoyed selecting their own outfits — ranging from casual to formal wear — strutting their stuff, dancing and great food and fellowship.

“Events like this one allow our children to have unique, positive experiences that promote strong social emotional development,” said STEPS Vice President for Early Childhood Education, Jessica Lehman. “Seeing the community and our families join to serve as role models for our children is tremendously rewarding and we look forward to our families coming up with additional cross county collaborative events like this one. Head Start has a strong volunteer and community engagement component and we hope this event was just a starting point.”

Reverend Sarah Moses-Womack, STEPS Head Start Policy Council representative from Cumberland, coordinated the Fashion Show to highlight the Head Start program and promote community and family engagement. Parents, children and community members from all eight counties served by the STEPS Head Start outreach — Amelia, Appomattox, Buckingham, Charlotte, Cumberland, Lunenburg, Nottoway and Prince Edward — joined in the fun, learning experience.

Melissa Foster, the keynote speaker, discussed her experiences as a Head Start participant and then teacher. Through generous donations from the community and families the facility was decorated, lunch was provided, and music added to create just the right tone.

STEPS’ Head Start is a federally funded education program that provides early interventions for children and families to increase self-sufficiency and school readiness. The program aims to positively impact children to help them to succeed, helping families to thrive and communities to improve.

STEPS FOR THE FUTURE
Breathing Life Into Old Buildings

STEPS Head Start breathed life into some old community buildings in 2017 to better serve families in Amelia and Lunenburg counties.

A $524,617 investment at the Dunn Street, Amelia Court House Center has transformed an aging cafeteria into an infant and toddler suite, serving 16 additional children and employing five additional staff. Renovations included the addition of a commercial kitchen as well as office space, staff bathroom, staff break room and upgraded heating and cooling systems. The existing playground space was also divided to add a new infant/toddler play yard. STEPS Head Start serves 34 children ages 3-5 and 16 infants and toddlers at the Amelia location.

A $304,550 investment at the Nottoway Boulevard, Victoria Head Start site has expanded services and revitalized the former grocery store, a well-known community landmark that was vacant for seven years. The interior of the building was renovated, and a fabulous playground added. STEPS Head Start has created nine new jobs including two early Head Start teaching positions, program aide, cook, four new bus staff and a site administrator. STEPS Head Start serves 34 children ages 3-5 and eight infants and toddlers at the Victoria site.

STEPS Head Start is a federally funded education program that provides early interventions for children and families to increase self-sufficiency and school readiness. The program aims to positively impact children to help them to succeed, helping families to thrive and communities to improve.
STEPS Head Start launched our Expectant Mother’s Program during the 2016-2017 program year. The Expectant Mother’s Program drives healthy outcomes for mom and baby through free prenatal education, connections to community, health and nutrition resources, and a variety of support services covering family needs, postpartum transition, and breastfeeding. Each participant completes curriculum at their own pace and participates in monthly support groups to connect with other participants. The program is open to mothers, fathers and other supporting family members.

Seirra, a soon to be first time mom, joined the STEPS Expectant Mother’s program in late 2017. She knew she did not want to use pain medication to assist with her delivery and was nervous about delivery and the challenges motherhood brings. Seirra attended all the support groups offered to her as well as every home visit scheduled with her STEPS Head Start Family Development Specialist, Jessica Rundstrom. Jessica states “Seirra asked questions and was very engaged in all the program had to offer her. During home visits Seirra and I would discuss ways to have a successful non-medicated birth, as well as other topics including the importance of nutrition, breastfeeding, fetal development, safe sleep practices and postpartum recovery.”

The Expectant Mother’s Program is just another way STEPS Head Start provides early interventions for children and families.

Seirra provided the following update on her journey: “I had baby DJ November 16th and he was absolutely perfect. I did have pre-eclampsia BUT when they went to induce me he was already coming. And I went through labor and delivery without an epidural like I wanted! I know it has been a while, but I just wanted to thank you for all of your help and support during my pregnancy.”

The Expectant Mother’s Program is available to residents of Amelia, Appomattox, Buckingham, Charlotte, Cumberland, Lunenburg, Nottoway and Prince Edward counties. Participants must meet federal eligibility guidelines.

Living Healthy in the Heart of Virginia Program

The Piedmont Health Coalition, the Prince Edward office of the Virginia Cooperative Extension, Longwood University, FeedMore, Piedmont Health District, FACES, Southside Virginia Family YMCA and STEPS have joined into an initiative to begin a program called Living Healthy in the Heart of Virginia Program (LHHV).

Six families will be provided the following:
- Membership and fitness activities at the Southside Virginia Family YMCA
- Weekly food allotments including additional lean meats and vegetables through FACES
- Food demonstrations through Virginia Cooperative Extension
- Monthly health screenings and resource information to families by Longwood University nursing students
- Courses on safety and proper health care and monitoring for the families from Longwood University nursing students
- Inspections to determine if there are safety issues in the home through STEPS.

Incentives will be available to encourage ongoing participation. LHHV is a nine-month program that began September 21, 2018, intended to determine the positive impact of healthy lifestyles and eating habits. This is all possible due to the desire to have a positive impact on the citizens of our community by many community partners in Central Virginia and funding provided by FeedMore.

To keep the body in good health is a duty ... Otherwise we shall not be able to keep our mind strong and clear.

“Good morning, Energy Share,” a friendly voice picking up the telephone intones.

Her voice is unmistakable. Anyone who has ever met Ernestine “Tina” Harris can identify it. There is an exuberance of life in it, an air of longevity, and experience in the crackles of every inflection.

Seventy-two year old Harris, part of the Senior Community Services Employment Program (Title V) administered in the region by STEPS Inc., has a lived a storied life. She grew up in Farmville during difficult times, fought discrimination as a youth leader in the NAACP, was raised by her grandmother, sprinkled in some college courses, got married and raised four children.

She has worked hard all her life, learned lessons that come with success and failure, is a woman of faith, a giving person that has a hard time saying “no” to those in need.

And Harris is like many of her generation: she is still driven to work.

The Title V program, which has existed since the Lyndon B. Johnson administration, gives seniors 55 and older facing employment barriers a chance to train in governmental agencies and non-profit organizations. The goal is to sharpen their skills, learn something new and help them find a job.

For Harris, that means training at STEPS three days a week helping the Dominion Energy Share Case Manager, Michele Childress answer the phone, record electrical service information, assist in the processing of paperwork, and helping those about to have their lights cut off get a little help in a moment of crisis.

Harris is enhancing her computer skills, adapting to technology, and fine tuning her customer service skills every day she comes to work.

“Love meeting people, giving out information and trying to help in whatever way I possibly can.”

— Ernestine Harris

STILL SERVING HER COMMUNITY.

“Love meeting people,” she says. “Love giving out information and trying to help in whatever way I possibly can.”

She has spent a lifetime quietly — and sometimes not so quietly — making a difference through peaceful change. As a 17-year old, she was part of a group of non-violent demonstrators seeking equality in job opportunities, nondiscriminatory business treatment and the reopening of the Prince Edward County’s Public Schools that were shuttered rather than integrated. She was among a group of protestors arrested for disturbing a public worship service when the group attempted to attend services at the all-white Farmville Baptist Church. Fifty years after the arrest, she was invited to be a special guest speaker at the same church.

Sometimes things change for the good.

Harris’ story is featured in All Eyes on Prince Edward County, a publication that records the personal stories of PE County residents impacted by the closing of the county’s public schools 1959-1964.

Huddled in a cubicle in the STEPS’ administrative complex, Harris helps Childress coordinate payments online as the summer season winds down. People on fixed incomes sometimes have a hard time making choices between eating and paying the light bill. Energy Share doesn’t pay the whole amount for those facing a cut-off notice, but it aims to help folks in a one-time-per-season get over the financial hump.

“Ernestine is a very dedicated worker,” Childress said. “She loves to learn new things, cares about people, has a sense of humor. She’s always there to help when asked.”

The training experience with Childress builds on her years working as a secretary from a community action agency in the early 1970s and her 31 years working for Aramark on Longwood University’s campus.

“I’ve learned a lot,” Harris says of her time in the Title V program. “I’ve been able to adjust to all types of situations.”

She adds, “... Just being able to have a job to come to three days a week, to get out of the house and be around other people, other than people that you see every day ... perks you up ... and it gives you something to look forward to.”

And it also gives her a chance to keep helping her community.

Head Start Review

The results of the most recent review by the United States Department of Health and Human Services

From February 5-8, 2018, the Administration for Children and Families (AFC) conducted a Focus Area Two Monitoring Review of STEPS, Inc., Head Start and Early Head Start programs. Based on the review the following improvement areas were identified.

- 1302.102 – “STEPS, Inc. did not publish an Annual Report for the program year 2015-2016.”
- 1302.31 – “STEPS, Inc. did not ensure teaching practices emphasized nurturing and responsive interactions that were language rich. Three classrooms in our Amelia location, out of ten classrooms observed, found communication between teachers and children was not language rich and included primarily yes or no questions or directives. There were limited verbal interactions between children and teachers. Behaviors in some classrooms did not allow teachers to individualize or build on experiences as they were redirecting behavior.”
- Head Start Act 348A – “STEPS Inc. did not ensure all staff obtained criminal record checks prior to hire.”

Concurrent to the Focus Area Two Review a CLASS (Classroom Assessment Scoring System) Review was conducted with STEPS, Inc. obtaining the following scores.
