City Council Candidates for District 3
By Melinda Pajak

It’s election time again on Tuesday, June 7, and those of us who live in District Three will be voting for a new city councilmember to represent us. We had a chance to interview the two candidates, Chris Ward and Anthony Bernal.

Chris Ward, a longtime resident of University Heights (UH) and member of University Heights Community Association (UHCA), has a strong background to be a potent force on the City Council. He currently works as the chief of staff for State Senator Marty Block and has previously worked as a Land Use/Urban Planner. Chris holds a master’s degree in public policy and urban planning from Harvard University. His priorities will be to increase public safety, reduce homelessness, and repair our infrastructure. In a perfect world, Chris says he would like to see UH in one planning group and not be divided between Uptown and North Park. Chris adds he knows he only has a short amount of time while in office but plans to use that opportunity to leave a positive mark on San Diego.

Anthony Bernal is also running for the City Council District 3 and currently serves as the director of community and business projects for Councilmember Todd Gloria. Anthony’s background in civil engineering working on water and wastewater projects in San Diego gives him a unique perspective. Anthony says his priorities will be to repair our infrastructure, reduce homelessness, create more affordable housing, increase public safety, and protect our water resources. Anthony says he is very concerned that our police force has decreased from 2,100 police officers to 1,800. Water is also one of his main concerns. As he walks our neighborhoods, Anthony appreciates the newly installed drought tolerant plants that have replaced many lawns. He would like to see the city enact policy to encourage more in this regard.

Anthony says he is excited to see some of the projects he has been working on coming to life like the new Mission Hills/Hillcrest Branch Library coming this summer. He has worked on getting this on the city’s capital improvement program list, which is the first step towards getting it done. In a perfect world, Chris says he would like to see UH in one planning group and not be divided between Uptown and North Park. Chris adds he knows he only has a short amount of time while in office but plans to use that opportunity to leave a positive mark on San Diego.

In addition, Chris supports turning the Old Teacher’s Annex into a new UH branch library. He has worked on getting this on the city’s capital improvement program list, which is the first step towards getting it done. In a perfect world, Chris says he would like to see UH in one planning group and not be divided between Uptown and North Park. Chris adds he knows he only has a short amount of time while in office but plans to use that opportunity to leave a positive mark on San Diego.

University Heights Map: Boundaries and Zone Watch

The bold street names on this map define the boundaries of the community of University Heights. Every block and apartment/condo should have an established Neighborhood Watch. A zone is a neighborhood within University Heights as defined by the six zones on this map. The blocks within each zone are linked together via a Zone Watch Coordinator who manages an email list of participants wishing to receive crime watch information. For questions or for more info, contact either your zone’s coordinator or Nan McGraw.

Trolley Barn Park Clean Up

On March 29, two groups of over 50 teenagers from New Vision Christian Fellowship and their leader Mike Haskins joined UH residents in filling over 30 bags with landscape debris at the Trolley Barn Park. The San Diego City Parks and Recreation groundskeeper had also been working to get it ready for its 25th anniversary celebration. Their hard work and enthusiasm is so appreciated. We hope you enjoy the results. There is a lot of energy afoot to improve the park after many years of minimal maintenance. Let us know if you want to help!
The Trolley Barn Park and Beginning of the University Heights Community Association

By Eric DuVall

In the early 1980s, my wife Janice and I had a little house just off of Florida St on Madison Avenue, and a baby daughter. We would push her around the neighborhood in her stroller, frequently going by the ruins of the old Trolley Car Barn on Adams Avenue. We didn’t know what had been there before, but we did wonder what was going to happen with that big piece of property. It looked like it would make a great spot for a park. It sure seemed like the neighborhood could use something like that, and it would have been ideal for us. So we started calling the Trolley Barn site “The Park.” We had been calling it that for maybe six months when Janice called me at work one day very upset. She said: “They’re building something at the Park!” I said, “What are you talking about?” She said, “There is a bunch of big earth moving equipment on that lot! Somebody is going to build something on our park!” False alarm. It turned out the city was doing some road work down the street, but that event got us moving. We found out that there was a project planned for the site: Two five story apartment buildings! We printed up some alarmist flyers spilling the beans on the “Apartment Towers.” Eventually we held a community meeting with close to two hundred riled up neighbors at Alice Birney Elementary School. That was the very beginning of the UHCA. University Heights as a community name had fallen out of common parlance at that time. People would say: “We live over by North Park.” So one of the first things the community association did was to put up the “Entering University Heights” signs on all the major thoroughfares. People began to say that they lived in University Heights.

The Park did not happen overnight. It took several years but we were finally able to convince the city to do the right thing and purchase that historic site for the beautiful Park we know today. A community may be a locale or a part of town, but people are what makes a community special. In our case the Trolley Barn Park became the issue that the people rallied around and that brought the community of University Heights together.

Friends of Trolley Barn Park

By Jill Briggs Campbell

Every person in the University Heights community has reason to love our Trolley Barn Park (TPB): families spending time together, dog lovers and others playing and exercising on the fields, groups celebrating in the picnic and barbecue areas, and folks just taking a stroll or bike ride along its paths. The TPB celebration on April 16 was a great reminder to us all of the importance of this community resource. Community members have shown new interest in preserving and improving the park by helping out with clean-ups and volunteering during the celebration, but we can do more.

To capture and coordinate this new interest and energy the University Heights Community Association and the Beautification Team is launching the Friends of Trolley Barn Park. This community group, through our soon to be new Facebook page (stay tuned) will welcome feedback and ideas for how the park can better serve the needs of the neighborhood. It will also inform the community of clean-up activities, future plans for the playground and canyon areas and more community events like the summer concert series.

We look forward to working with the families and other members of the community who use and cherish the park to make the next 25 years even better!

Please contact Jill Briggs Campbell at: friendsofTPB@gmail.com to join the Friends of Trolley Barn Park. We will soon have a Facebook page and there will be recurring articles in this newspaper.
There are plumes apery to hand out in thanks for 25th anniversary celebration of our neighborhood landmark, the Trolley Barn Park, the event we all call TBP25.

Thanks to the volunteers who made the TBP25 such a huge success! Our sincerest thanks go especially to Monica Lanctot, fearless chairperson of the event, and the planning committee: Erin MacKinnon, Mary Anne Stevens, Edie Jacobsen, Bernie Horan, Dong Wallingford, Nan McGraw, Peter Rose, and Paul Farris. They all deserve special plumes!

Thanks to the Saturday TBP25 day-of-the-event volunteers: George Lamb, Kristie Edgmond, Susy & Dave Holts, Peter & Pati Roehrs, Mary-Iheh Chrudum & Bill Smith, Tim Sanders, Scott Schechter, Jill Briggs, Chris Hudy, JD Abercrombie, Marcia & Greg Sortini, Maureen Markley & Peter Rose, Kathi & John Kennedy, Nancy & Rod Girvin, Jeff Johnston, Phyllis Charlton & Randy Dropkin, Stu McGraw, Barb Noyer, Jeannie Hine, Carol Neidenberg, Geoff Morrison, Nicholas Morrison, Mike Rybarczyk, Adam Graham, Genene Johnson, and Dennis Smith (also helped with the construction of the outdoor games) - as well as the planning committee: mentioned above. A special thanks goes to Woodie Wilson for coordinating the park set up. Thanks also to Speaker Emeritus Toni Atkins, Chair of the Board of Supervisors Ron Roberts, Councilmember Todd Gloria, former Councilmember John Hartley, and of course, the primary reason the TBP exists: Janice and Eric DuVall.

Thank you to all the event sponsors who made this possible: Miller Design, Mary Anne Stevens Realty, Fenton Development Group, Pemberley Realty, Twigs, Logistic Property Management, UCSD Medical Center, Nature's Whisper Vons, Paul Farris Design, and Nan McGraw.

And, thank you, Susan Holts, for the beautifully decorated raffle prizes bags!

Again, bouquets of ostrich plumes to Monica for taking charge of this event, Erin MacKinnon for her ideas and drive to make the day special for children of all ages, and Paul Farris for the wonderful designs and his amazing creativity that brought to life what the celebration was all about: fun and a community gathering on a perfect spring day in University Heights!

There’s a Yarn of Yarns

It was a fun evening and concluded with Sue tossing Padre paraphernalia to some lucky audience recipients.

We had an extra treat that evening, pies from POP Pie Co., a new store coming to UH later this spring. You’ve probably noticed their location on the corner of Meade Avenue and Park Boulevard. We are all drooling in anticipation.

Continued

Anthony also worked on the Birney Joint-Use Field initiative, which is a boon for all of us living nearby. He would love to see the Old Teacher’s Annex become a community hub with a library, green space for recreation, and an outdoor concert area. Anthony says he sees UH’s unique position of being in two planning groups as a positive because he sees potential for receiving developer impact fees from both groups, thereby enhancing projects and amenities for UH. Anthony loves seeing improvements get done in the neighborhood.

Please read up on both of these well-qualified candidates before June 7.

My spouse is a small-business owner, and having once been a part of her business, I know how rewarding the experience is—but I especially know how much work it can be!

We hear a lot about the largest companies—the Apples and the Googles, for example—but small business is the backbone of our local, state, and national economy as well. We have 3.5 million small businesses in California and they account for more than half of our jobs. These businesses offer every good and service you can imagine. There's good food at restaurants and cafes, helpful service from mechanics and plumbers, and just the item you need from local grocers and boutique owners.

And as committed as small businesses are to their work, in the Assembly we are committed to helping them succeed. I want to highlight one of the state's small grocers and boutique owners.

Andrea Tosi, who owns the Twiggs cafe and mercantile in San Diego’s University Heights neighborhood, is well-known among local residents and businesses for her good food, knowledgeable staff, and welcoming ambiance. twiggscafe.com

Over 200,000 people in the region are employed by businesses with less than 10 employees. Patronizing small businesses is a way to support local jobs while you shop for one-of-a-kind gifts for friends, family, or even yourself. Shopping small also allows people to leave the stressors of crowds and fighting for parking at malls behind, and instead walk or bike to shops in their own neighborhood.

University Heights’ small business culture has continued to thrive with restaurants and retail shops opening up year after year that showcase the community’s great sense of style and innovative spirit. From Park Boulevard to Adams Avenue and El Cajon Boulevard, clusters of businesses have joined together over the years and become vital community partners. They administer additional maintenance and streetscape enhancements for their districts, host annual events, and give back to local schools and organizations. As the elected representative for many thriving small businesses, I've worked on common sense regulatory reforms to foster economic development, such as reducing impediments to permitting sidewalk cafes so that businesses and their patrons can enjoy San Diego's beautiful weather while they dine.

There is no comparing the personalized service and experience one can get at a neighborhood business with a national chain. We can make a huge difference in our communities by choosing to shop small and encourage everyone to explore the neighborhood and support local businesses.

This is a tax credit available to businesses that want to come to California or stay here and grow. The state has set aside $250 million from the California Competes tax credits in this fiscal year. Better yet, 25% of the program’s credits are reserved for small businesses. San Diego has done exceptionally well since the awards began being issued in 2014—dozens of companies have received valuable credits to create thousands of jobs. In addition, the recipients represent many different and varied industries, from aerospace and bio-tech to craft brewing and construction.

I have held several workshops for San Diego small businesses, helping them work through the California Competes application process and it’s great to hear the enthusiasm from those business owners. Applications for the final round of this year closed last month. I'm confident San Diego businesses will again be well represented when the winners are announced.

In addition, we'll soon honor small businesses in my district. Last year, I was pleased to select Twiggs to represent University Heights. The cafe has become a home away from home for neighbors and community groups alike, along with being known as a go-to bakery for unique wedding cakes.

Supporting small business should be a priority in each of our communities, and I will continue not only to do my part in Sacramento, but in my choices of where I go to shop and dine when I'm not at the office.

Toni Atkins represents the 36th California Assembly District and is Speaker Emeritus of the California Assembly.
The Importance of One Planning Group

By Cheryl Cooke

In the last few months, there has been a lot of talk about the future of University Heights (UH), the proposed developments, the extra density bonus plans and how they will affect our city. Why is this happening?

UH is currently divided between two community planning groups. West of Park Blvd. is in the Uptown Planners district, east of Park is in the North Park Planners district. Four years ago, JD Abercrombie of the University Heights Community Association (UHCA) led the charge to unite all of UH up to Texas Street under the Uptown Planners planning group.

In 2015 again, votes were taken supporting one city planning group and against bonus densities within both sides of UH proposed under the draft North Park Community Plan at www.sandiego.gov/planning/community/profiles/greaternorthpark and the Uptown Community Plan www.sandiego.gov/planning/community/profiles/uptown/plan.

Then I personally realized that my home was at risk and that UH and the UHCA has had active representation on the Uptown Planners committee and minimum on the North Park Planning Committee (NPPC). I was quite angered by what I had found out and decided to start learning more about the NPPC.

Like Uptown Planners, the NPPC at northparkplanning.org provides advisory recommendations to the City of San Diego regarding projects in the community and is recognized by the city as an important part of the approval process for new development and services. The more participants, the more influence we have on the future of UH! I encourage those who live east of Park Boulevard to join me in getting more involved in this organization.

NPPC meetings are held monthly (except December) on the third Tuesday of every month at 6:30 pm at the North Park Christian Fellowship, located at 2901 North Park Way.

I encourage you to join me, an east UH resident, to become more involved and present a united front to our next city councilman about the importance of keeping all of University Heights in one planning group and keeping University Heights the community we know and love.

THE CRACK SHACK

By Andrea Bacal

The Crack Shack is a happenin’ place! No matter what time we have gone, it is filled with happy folks looking like they are having a terrific time. Even when they are in line, they are having a good time. Myself, I did not look forward to being in a long line, so I used the very cool widget on their website showing the most and least crowded days and hours of the day to go.

On our first visit we stayed with the basics — fried chicken, fries and a Caesar salad. The fried chicken was like other new chicken places; the crust was very hard and crunchy, not like what one usually thinks of as traditional buttermilk battered Southern fried chicken — just a different style. But it was still wonderfully moist and juicy inside. There is a terrific sauce bar with six or so interesting sauces and dips. Our favorites were the kimchi BBQ and chimichurri.

We eat pretty healthy meals regularly so we can splurge once in a while in those high fat fried foods that tempt many of us. The schmaltz fries seemed right up our alley. After all, if duck fat fries are heaven, why wouldn’t chicken fat fries be just as heavenly? Even with all the training our innards have in dealing with fatty foods, these fries proved to be challenging. Yes, to the mouth they were heaven. But after splitting half the order, we had our fill. So make sure you split the schmaltz fries with your whole group!

The sides are unique. The deviled eggs (three ways) were to die for, especially if you are deviled egg freaks like we are. Ditto the chicken oysters. These are the very succulent small pieces of dark meat hidden between the thigh and the back of the chicken, beautifully battered and fried, and served with a very nice sauce. Here was our opportunity to try all the dips. Yummmm!

On our second visit, we shared the Brick House sandwich — too much bread for my taste, but a wonderful combination of flavors and textures. Next time we will try the Coop Deville, which many say is their best sandwich. Do try the unique sodas at their soda fountain, unless you are trying one of their many craft beer selections.

There are young people at the bar, drinking and laughing, but many older folks and families as well, sitting at the family style picnic tables or smaller round tables. There is a bocce court that went unused each time we were there, except for the kids running around on it.

The Crack Shack has found a great formula for attracting a happy clientele who seem to be coming back and telling their friends. I suggest using the crowd meter on their website to pick the best time to go! There is something magical about sitting under the sparkling lights, with the fun food, and the bustling happy crowd around you laughing and having a good time.

How to Eat Out at Restaurants

By Brian White

Eating out at restaurants is a way of life. We go out to eat when we want to spend time with friends, we go out to eat when we need to talk business, we go out to eat when there is no time to cook, we go out so there are no dishes to clean up. Since there is a multitude of great places to eat in University Heights (UH), you need to have a plan if you want to maintain your health and body when you are out and about.

Here are five items to include in your plan. First, plan ahead. The worst position to put yourself in and one that almost guarantees an unhealthy meal choice is to go to a new restaurant while you are starving. Nobody has that kind of will power. If you go online and look at their menu ahead of time and pick the healthiest option, you are far less likely to be swayed by other choices. (Oooh, chocolate cake!)

Second, do the fork dip. The best way to combine your salad dressing with your salad is to dip your fork into the dressing before each forkful of salad - you’ll be surprised how little dressing you’ll use.

Third, portion control. It has been shown that most restaurants will double the amount of calories than what it is listed on the menu, and that is bad news. Ask to box half your entree before it even arrives at the table. Out of sight, out of mind!

Fourth, ask for more vegetables. Many restaurants treat vegetables almost like a garnish and many will gladly double or even triple the amount of vegetables for you if you just ask.

Fifth and finally, be assertive. There is a lot of competition in the restaurant industry, so do not be afraid to ask for your meal exactly the way you want it. Most restaurants will cooperate with you for a healthier option.

SIXTH GRADE CAMP WAS AWESOME!
The Roosevelt PTSA took 72 students to Camp Cuyamaca Outdoor School over spring break. Once a district-sponsored event, SDUSD students now attend over their spring break, at a cost of $350 per student. Many students needed financial support in order to attend. This life-changing experience offers hands-on science that has been shown to be more effective than three months of classroom instruction, and is often students’ first time away from home, fostering independence and self-reliance. If you’d like to donate to support next year’s trip, you can do so at: http://roosevelt-6th-grade-camp.weebly.com/donate.html.

WHAT IS AN INTERNATIONAL BACCALAUREATE SCHOOL?
Have you been wondering what makes Roosevelt International Baccalaureate (IB) education unique? Because of its rigorous academic and personal standards, Roosevelt’s IB program provides students with a high-quality education built on inquiry-based instruction across all subject areas. The IB program provides an instructional framework that encourages our students to understand the connections between traditional subjects and the real world as creative, critical and reflective thinkers, and engages them in global issues through inquiry, action, and critical reflection.

The IB program is designed to help students find a sense of belonging in an increasingly interrelated world by fostering a positive attitude toward learning and living as fully engaged citizens. Roosevelt International Middle School is part of over 4,200 IB schools and more than 1.25 million students located around the world who are all united by a powerful mission: to develop internationally minded people who recognize their common humanity and shared guardianship of the planet.

Roosevelt students understand their responsibility to help create a better and more peaceful world and are internationally aware. The IB program at Roosevelt provides students with the 21st Century skills that will help them become responsible members of local, national, and global communities of the future.

ROOSEVELT’S IB FESTIVAL IS COMING MAY 17
On May 17, Roosevelt will have our IB Festival. This family friendly and free event will feature informational tables for school clubs, performances by our cheerleaders, band, orchestra, and dance. Student work and art will be also displayed. Our Frisbee Golf Club will have an activity, too, and hot dogs, hamburgers, popcorn, and nachos will be provided for sale by our ASB and M.e.C.H.A student groups. Check back for more details and come see all that Roosevelt has to offer!

TEACHER OF THE YEAR - MR. GARCIA
Congratulations to our Roosevelt teacher of the year, Francisco Garcia. Mr. Garcia teaches Sixth Grade English and History and organizes our after school garden club. He was selected by his peers to represent Roosevelt.

The Book Club & Salon: Someone By Alice McDermott

Readers first meet the bespectacled Marie Commellord, age seven, sitting on her Brooklyn stoop in her tight-knit, Irish Catholic neighborhood waiting for her father to come home from work. Watching her 1920s neighborhood through her thick glasses, her poor eyesight makes her both figuratively and literally unable to see the world for what it is. From that point on, author McDermott takes us through her daily life from childhood until old age.

Marie lives an average life, but longs for “someone.” Interwoven with heartache, lost love and family obligations, the story bears witness to a life lived through days. The story is episodic, interrupted with occasional jumps back and forth in time. The reader comes to have sympathy for this unremarkable woman, whose vulnerability, depicted in her life experiences, makes her all the more worthy of our attention. McDermott’s keenly observed novel of conformity, selfhood and lace-curtain pretensions celebrates family, community and the grace of a shared past.

McDermott was born in Brooklyn in 1953. She is the 1987 recipient of a Whiting Writers Award and a three-time Pulitzer Prize nominee for fiction. She has taught at the University of California, San Diego (UCSD). Join the Book Club & Salon discussion on Wednesday, May 25, at 6:30 pm. The book will be available at the UH Library’s front desk during April and May. New members are always welcome!

Fifty years ago in April, the University Heights (UH) Library opened its doors on Park Blvd. It is actually the third incarnation of a library in UH; over 100 years ago, on Mississippi Street, the first branch library in the City of San Diego was the University Heights Library. That was replaced later a Spanish Colonial Revival building at the present site of the UH Library, which was later torn down and replaced by the present library, a modernist gem. Noted San Diego architect Hal Sadler designed this classic Mid-Century Modern building, complete with space below for a bookmobile. Remember those?

Hal Sadler is retired now but his firm Tucker Sadler Architects is one of the most prestigious firms in San Diego. Hal’s signature is all over this city and beyond. We are fortunate to have such a good example of his modernism, the clean lines and lack of ornamentation, in this special building.

The UH Friends have been busy the last two years sprucing it up and we will continue until the building shines. You may have already noticed the cool banners, the snazzy new book drop off box, and the succulent garden. We hope for more improvements before we celebrate its birthday and that’s where you come in. Please help the Friends by saving your books for our main fundraising effort that is, the August book sale. August 1 will be our kick-off book drive. The money raised selling books in August will go directly toward more improvements to our branch library.

Also stay tuned for news of a birthday celebration in October when our elected officials and renowned architect Hal Sadler will join us.

UH LIBRARY BUILDING CELEBRATES 50 YEARS

There are two things we all should keep in mind about how water can create dangerous situations in our community. First, a few years back I wrote a piece about a dangerous underground water leak at the intersection of Washington Street and Lincoln Avenue. Fortunately, after many calls, finally to Councilmember Gloria’s office, a crew was sent to repair before a sinkhole swallowed up some traffic.

If you see water bubbling up in streets or grounds, call the city water department to alert them. If it’s on private property, you or they are responsible for stopping the leak.

Here’s why it’s so important: flowing water will eventually work its way to that lower ground, and once it is no longer being slowed by having to bore its way downward, the flow increases according to the amount of pressure in the leaking pipe. Once the water no longer has resistance, a sinkhole will eventually be “dug.” Also, if you see water bubbling up, it’s from a leak in a pressurized pipe and that it will not stop until the leak is repaired!

Finally, if there’s a significant earthquake, breaks in pressurized water lines and gas lines, are likely to create hazards that MUST be reported. Don’t hesitate to use our excellent Neighborhood Watch system, especially if you haven’t been trained by the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program.

Since sewer and storm drains aren’t pressurized, they pose less of a threat but backups with either should still be reported. To report a leak, meter leak, sewer spill, or pressure problem, call (619) 535-3523 or go to www.sandiego.gov/water/.

Standing water also presents its own dangers including serving as a breeding ground for mosquitoes that carry various nasty diseases. The most recent one is Zika, a virus that can be carried to anywhere in the world by an infected human. You can find a link to a Zika map at www.cdc.gov/zika/glos/united-states.html. Information about other well-known viral diseases that mosquitoes can carry can be found www.mosquito.org/mosquito-borne-diseases.

Now that we’re in warmer weather when mosquitoes breed, we need to be vigilant about eliminating standing water on our own properties and calling attention to it on public lands. Such alerts are handled by vector control programs such as the city’s Department of Environmental Health Services at www.sandiego.gov/deh/pests/vector_disease.html or (619) 694-2888.

Finally, a water-saving tip: If you have gutters, clean them and then put rain barrels below to collect the wonderful, soft rainwater. Even if you look on Amazon, you won’t find a better price for rain barrels than Lemon Grove’s SD Drums & Totes (www.sddrums.com). They sell recycled Greek 58-gallon olive barrels, with fittings to connect them to your downspouts, for $57 (see information at sddrums.com/product/a-rain-barrel-58-gallon-spagyced). They have other, more decorative drums and fittings valves, stands to elevate the barrels. The SoCal Water District will give you a $75 rebate per barrel up to four per house address (no reimbursement for sales tax). Information about this program is at socalwatersmart.com/page_id=2973.

Also check out the rules for a similar rebate for “cisterns” with a minimum capacity of 200 gallons – the rebate is $300. That also goes well with SD Drums’ cylindrical, 430-gallon tank, which sells for $500. Less $300 gets you a capacity more than the four 58 gallon barrels, is which 232 gallons with a 4 X $75 rebate is $300.

The City of San Diego also has a rain barrel rebate program, which you can read about at www.sandiego.gov/water/conservation/rebates/rainbarrel.shtml so, let’s be alert for the dangers water can allow so far from the ocean and save precious water falling onto our roofs.
