Richard Barrera has represented District D on the San Diego Unified School Board since 2008. He has helped lead the District through the most devastating financial cuts in the history of California public schools, by pulling together a community coalition of students, parents, teachers, classified staff, neighborhood, business and civic leaders around a common vision of excellence in our public schools.

Despite the budget cuts, during Mr. Barrera’s time on the Board students in San Diego Unified have achieved record high achievement rates, and today rank at or near the top of California public schools, by pulling together a community coalition of students, parents, teachers, classified staff, neighborhood, business and civic leaders around a common vision of excellence in our public schools.

University Heights is represented by two city-recognized community planning groups. Uptown Planners represents those UH residents who live west of Park Blvd., and North Park Planning Committee (NPPC) represents those who live east of Park Blvd. Both community planning groups will be holding elections for their respective boards in March.

Along with a focus on supporting students in the classroom, Mr. Barrera has also led the District’s efforts in securing billions of dollars in investment in school facilities, including breakthrough investments in 21st century technology and environmentally sustainable infrastructure. He has led the effort to honor the work of our educators by increasing salaries, maintaining affordable healthcare, and increasing effective training for the people who work directly with our kids.

The San Diego Unified School District, like many in California, finds itself property rich but revenue poor because of demographic changes and declining enrollments. It needs a new administrative center, but that costs a lot of money it doesn’t have. However, it does have the Ed Center property, a significant asset that is underused, and whose buildings are inadequate and expensive to maintain.

This situation could be a disaster on a par with the threat of condos on Washington Street. That would be a big win. However, it could be a great opportunity. Imagine if the properties the district trades for a new center are more valuable than the buildings they receive (which is what they expect). Perhaps a portion of the surplus could go toward funding restoration of the Teacher’s Annex. DIF fees from development might pay for a new park or improvements to Washington Street. That would be a big win.

Although it is natural to fear change, if the change is inevitable, it is appropriate to insist upon compensation for the loss of a historic building, hard-to-come-by open space, increased density, and more traffic. UHCA intends to provide a forum for such a discussion with city and school district officials at its next community meeting on March 1, because that’s what a community association does. You should be there (and become a member), because that’s what concerned neighbors do.

SLOW DOWN SIGNS

Speeding on neighborhood streets in UH is a chronic problem. Sharing time off trips by speeding has small benefits and high risks. Set your alarm clock 15 minutes ahead and slow down.

PRESIDENT'S CORNER
CAROL NEIDENBERG

Admittedly, I have mixed feelings about the proposed increased housing density and development in University Heights. In many ways, I straddle the fence: a preservationist at heart, yet also a pragmatist. I feel fortunate to have moved to UH when it wasn’t necessarily a desirable community and now live in an historic 1915 Craftsman overlooking a beautiful canyon.

Through my day job of working with disabled and homeless individuals, I have grown keenly aware of the profound lack of affordable housing. Looking at census figures, we know that University Heights is considered to be a “lower income” neighborhood (based on the county’s median income) with residents’ incomes averaging about $79,000. We all know that there’s a critical need to build housing. How about $79,000. We all know that there’s to be a “lower income” neighborhood, with children and seniors.

What makes a neighborhood vibrant is a mixture of residents, housing, places to shop and eat, and green space. UH wants to preserve its rich history while at the same time embracing innovative solutions, so we can prepare for our future. Children and successive generations. Whatever plan is finally approved must include these critical elements.

The City of San Diego is in the process of updating its utility undergrounding master plan, which is expected to be submitted to the City Council for approval in May 2018.

The new plan will document only the upcoming five years of implementation, with annual updates to cover an additional fifth year, in contrast to the past process of trying to estimate the entire remaining areas to be undergrounded over the approximately seventy years to complete that effort.

Unfortunately, the first draft five-year implementation plan for undergrounding does not include any portion of University Heights. Mission Hills, North Park and South Park all have large areas scheduled for undergrounding, but there is nothing planned for our neighborhood. This means we will continue to have exposed utility lines, but will not see any benefits in our neighborhood, potentially for decades to come.

I encourage you to contact Councilmember Chris Ward’s office with comments. Tyler Rep for University Heights, and you can reach him at trenter@sandiego.gov. Molly Chase is Councilmember Ward’s Chief of Staff, at mbchase@sandiego.gov.

Here are some of my thoughts/comments:

We would like University Heights to be added to the new five-year undergrounding master plan and would like the community to be involved in the planning process.

The City is prioritizing areas that are heavily used by bicyclists and pedestrians and our neighborhood certainly fits that description. University Heights is enjoyed by local residents, people from surrounding neighborhoods, and out-of-town visitors (especially because of our central location and proximity to Balboa Park, downtown, and the beaches). We have incredible vistas from our neighborhood and removal of the power lines would make our neighborhood even more beautiful and safe for residents and visitors.

Every year we are losing a significant number of mature trees in University Heights because of SDG&E’s vegetation management near their power lines. UHCA is currently working with the City to plant new street trees along our roads. We want to protect existing mature trees and new trees by moving the lines underground.

We have fairly frequent power outages in our neighborhood and would benefit from more reliable and safe underground utilities. Our neighborhood is small with natural boundaries from the canyons and could be completed relatively quickly. —Erin MacKinnon

OPEN HOUSE 2018 OFFERS

If you’re an architecture and design aficionado, you’ve probably often passed a building or house and said to yourself “I wish I could get a look at the inside!” Well, now’s your chance to do just that. On Saturday, March 24th, and Sunday, March 25th, buildings in San Diego will open their doors to the public as part of this year’s Open House! San Diego (OH!).

OH! is a program of the San Diego Architectural Foundation (sdarchitect.org) that covers Downtown, Bankers Hill, Barrio Logan, and (new this year), Point Loma. The program includes almost 80 sites, twice the number of last year. OH! seeks to showcase the importance of good design in the built environment.

A full list of Open House tours was not built environment.

Community planning groups advise the city on infrastructure, land use, development, and transportation issues in their geographic areas. With many ongoing and planned developments along the main corridors of University Heights, both planning groups will have an important role in shaping the neighborhood’s future.

Several University Heights residents have stepped up to run for an open seat on NPPC, including Randy Wilde. A long-time resident who has rented on Park Boulevard for the past three years, Randy is working on his Master of Public Policy at UCSD, with research focusing primarily on urban land use, economic, and environmental issues.

Randy believes that the combination of historic single-family homes, unique local businesses, transit access, and walkability make UH San Diego’s most livable neighborhood. Randy is a bicycle and transit rider as well as a driver. He believes in balancing the needs of all transportation modes, home-owners, renters, and local businesses. Randy is asking for your support.

Three seats will be open on the Uptown Planners board. Uptown Planners will hold its elections on March 6, at 6 pm at the Joyce Beers Center in Uptown Complex, 3900 Vermont St. Board members of Uptown Planners are elected to four-year terms each March. To vote for Board members or to apply for Board membership, one must either reside or own a business within the boundaries of Uptown and provide proof of his/her address. Also, to qualify for election, Board candidates must have attended at least three meetings of Uptown Planners in the year prior to the March election meeting.

Please consider voting so that University Heights will be well represented on these important boards.

THE NEW EL CAJON BOULEVARD

This column was deliberately named “On the Boulevards” (note the s at the end of the word boulevard) to drive home the point that there are two main thoroughfares that dominate the cityscape in our community of University Heights (UH), and both are named “Boulevard.” One is Park Boulevard, the rather humbler of the two, which has the UH street sign.

The other is El Cajon Boulevard, the larger, broader, more traffic-heavy of the two and the one that is currently the focus of much development and redevelopment in UH. At the corner of Florida St. and El Cajon Blvd., construction of The Boulevard by H.G. Fenton, the local real estate and development company, continues apace. Expected occupancy is listed on the company website, hgfenton.com, as “spring 2018,” but I think that looks dubious as they are still building out the stud walls of the upper floors.

The Evelyn, at 2129 El Cajon Blvd., is a just-completed luxury townhouse community, with car access through a rear alley into a shared parking court. The building is a mix of one, two, and three bedroom rental units, with garages and rooftop decks. Rental prices start at $2500 for a one-bedroom unit to $4000 for a loft.

Then there’s the curious Exotic Gardens, at 4319 Mississippi St., an L-shaped building that wraps around an apparent lone holdout bungalow and that has a side that fronts El Cajon Blvd., directly across from the Lafayette Hotel. The lone bungalow continues as a hair salon. Units in this five-story building include a mix of studios, one bedroom and two-bedroom units, and two-bath lofts, with rents starting at $2050 per month for one of those studios.

The corner of El Cajon and Mississippi is quite the spot. Two more existing buildings at that intersection are in the beginning stages of redevelopment or renovation. On the northwest corner is a mid-century modern building that displays a Friend to Friend (F2F) Episcopal Family Services sign. The building is empty and has a fence and screen around it, indicating some renovation may be in short order. Across the street directly, on the southwest corner, and as it happens, right next to The Evelyn, is a boarded-up bungalow with a worn and forlorn looking “Health Services” sign above the door. It looks more like a teardown, but we’ll see.

And lastly, let’s once again give kudos where due, to the Lafayette Hotel, Swim Club & Bungalows at 2223 El Cajon Blvd., whose own renaissance a few years ago from a rundown Clarion to the height of hip in University Heights, has in many respects helped drive the resurrection of El Cajon Blvd. and the surrounding parts of UH both north and south of El Cajon.

BUNGALOW COURTS
THE ORIGINAL “TINY HOME VILLAGE”

No doubt you’ve read the headlines: “Tiny homes are the next big thing!” A growing list of fans exclaim their benefits: “Less cleaning!” “More time!” “Health Services” building. At right, The Evelyn,

A growing list of fans exclaim their benefits: “Less cleaning!” “More time!” “Affordability!” Some say it’s even better when you pull a few together because then you have a small community, or a “tiny home village,” as they are generally known. These homes/villages are most sought after by two of the largest population groups: seniors looking to downsize, and millennials looking to downsize, and millennials looking to downsize, and millennials looking to downsized, at 4319 Mississippi St., an

Many in University Heights know that tiny home villages aren’t actually a new idea. We know them as bungalow courts. These charming little cottages fit the current definition of small/tiny home living. They are fully self-contained homes with a bedroom, bathroom, kitchen/kitchenette, and living space in a 450-800 sq. ft. package. These homes come in many different layouts and designs, usually in clusters of six to ten, but they all have one thing in common. They are miniature communities that have nestled into neighborhoods so well that very few have been torn down. A study done by J.R. Curtis and L. Ford in 1988 found that 80 percent of the bungalow courts in central San Diego were still intact and the vast majority appeared to be in excellent condition.

Rene Davids, a researcher from UC Berkeley, found that bungalow courts increase residents’ health by naturally creating community while also allowing space for each individual’s identity. She believes that the benefits extend to other homeowners in the area because the courts’ design fits into the character of the neighborhood.

If bungalow courts fit the lifestyles and pocketbooks of the two largest groups of our population, stand the test of time, and are healthy places to live, why don’t we build more of them? --Ellen F. Stone, M.A.; Nonprofit Professional and Mental Health Advocate; Chair, Tiny Home Central 619-616-0079.

They say there’s no place like home. In University Heights we are fortunate to call such a neighborhood our home.

In recent years there has been a shift in the American collective consciousness towards the ideology of urban living. This has changed many urban, inner-city neighborhoods into hotbeds for conformist gentrification because of their now sky-high rents, attracting a clone-like, cookie-cutter clientele whose social isolation can be compared only to that of their gated suburban ancestors.

In 2018, University Heights has yet to succumb to the peer pressure of its neighborhood cousins. Art, liberty, culture, diversity, community, connection: Just a handful of words that come to mind when describing University Heights. Every year politicians make campaign promises to reshape their community into a place that holds many of the values that we already enjoy in University Heights. Houses of every shape and size, color, and style peacefully coexist beyond the sidewalks of our community. From the mystique of the restored Bentley to the nostalgia of the Volkswagen buses and Vespas, both pedestrian and motor travelers share our streets year-round. Whether you’re meeting for coffee on Park Blvd. or cruising down the palm tree-bordered Maryland Street at sunset, University Heights is never disappointing.

Our neighborhood is accepting and tolerant. Regardless of family or political party affiliations, the majority of Americans share the ideology of an accepting and peaceful future for the United States. University Heights is already this country. University Heights is the America I want to live in, the America I believe in. --Adam Bloodgood

BITTERSWEET CHOCOLATE IRISH WHISKEY CAKE

INGREDIENTS
- 1/2 cup plus 2 tbsp. Irish whiskey
- 6 tbsp. bittersweet (70% cocoa) chocolate
- 1/2 tsp. vanilla sugar
- 1/2 cup plus 2 tbsp. butter

PREPARATION
Position rack in center of oven and preheat to 350°F. Butter and flour 8-inch-diameter springform pan.

Boil 1/2 cup whiskey in small saucepan until reduced to 1/4 cup, about 2 minutes. Combine bittersweet chocolate, espresso mixture, and 1/4 cup boiled whiskey in small metal bowl. Place bowl over pan of simmering water. Sauté until smooth. Remove bowl from heat. Finely grate almonds with 2 tbsp. flour in food processor. With electric mixer, beat 1/2 cup butter and 6 tbsp. vanilla sugar in medium bowl until fluffy. Beat in egg yolks at a time, until soft and light. Fold in chocolate mixture, then ground almond mixture. With clean dry beaters, beat egg whites in another bowl until soft peaks form. Gradually add 1 tbsp. vanilla sugar, beating until stiff peaks form. Fold whites into batter alternately with remaining 3 tbsp. flour in 3 additions. Transfer batter to prepared pan.

Bake cake until tester inserted into center comes out clean, about 40 minutes. Cool in pan on rack 30 minutes. Remove pan sides and cool cake completely.

Combine semisweet chocolate and remaining 2 tbsp. whiskey in small metal bowl. Place bowl over pan of simmering water and stir until smooth. Remove bowl from heat. Add remaining 1/4 cup butter to chocolate mixture, 1 small piece at a time, whisking until each piece is melted before adding next. Place bowl over pan of ice water. Using electric mixer, beat icing until thickened to spreadable consistency, about 1 minute. Spread icing over top and sides of cake.

Makes 8 to 10 servings. Can be made 8 hours ahead. Cover with cake dome and let stand at room temperature.

THE COFFEE STOP

TWIGGS BAKERY & COFFEEHOUSE

The moon showed up at the coffee house and sat on top of the cup, but just for those who paid attention and received a well-made beverage and well-located seat. Yes, some things can turn a good evening coffee into something special if you are lucky—and I thing was.

A hot winter is not common in San Diego, nor is the celestial phenomenon of a super blue blood moon. It happened very early in the morning and when it got dark again, I took the #11 bus to Park Boulevard Business District and got off at Stop No. 11673 under the neon trolley light.

Drinking coffee after noon time is prohibited for many people. This is not my case, but Twiggs Bakery & Coffeehouse has a dedicated decaf grinder for espresso beverages and one air pot for those who are wary of sleepless nights. I ordered a latte. Instead of a fancy pattern on top, the barista made a small but perfect bright circle surrounded by a thick dark brown ring. It seemed simple, but when I sat down at the corner of the large table, I saw the moon through the open door rising from a silhouette of trees in a dark sky. That image was also in my cup, and then I realized that just three chairs

OFF TO AN IMPRESSIVE START

The University Heights Beautification Team and its supporting volunteers got off to a fast start in the new year. The first week of January found team members adding new plants to the bus stop garden on Park Boulevard adjacent to the Birney playing field. Later in the month, volunteers completed a major landscape project along the entrance to the I-15 onramp at the intersection of Lincoln and Washington. Weed cloth was put down prior to placement of rocks, with the addition of new drought-tolerant plants to significantly improve the appearance of this high visibility area. Before the month came to an end, another team continued with the stripping, priming, and painting of benches in Trolley Barn Park in our ongoing bench restoration initiative.

Throughout the month, team members and supporting volunteers continued to empty the trash can at the Vermont Street Bridge while whacking weeds and picking up trash throughout the community. Thank you to all of the volunteers who have gotten us off to a great start this year in helping to make our community such a beautiful place to work and live. – Rod Girvin, Chair of the UHCA Beautification Team

STREET TREE UPDATE

What better way to show someone you love them than by planting a tree in their honor? The UHCA Beautification Team is still collecting signed water agreements for a free street tree planted by the city. Mayor Faulconer and the City of San Diego have made a pledge to plant 1,000 new street trees by the year 2020 (as outlined in the City’s Climate Action Plan). As a community, we would like to help out as much as possible. The benefits of street trees go beyond environmental concerns as well. While helping to boost property values, they lower ground temperatures, making it more convenient to walk and bike. Street trees slow traffic, help keep parked cars cool in the summer, and can assist in lowering your cooling bills! Overall, they are a win-win for everyone, and the UHCA Beautification Team would love to get as many of the allocated street trees the City has planned for our neighborhood.

A wise person once wrote, the best time to plant a tree was 20 years ago - and the second best time to plant one is now, so we are calling for your assistance to help make our neighborhood a beautiful and livable place. If you would like to participate in the UH Street Tree team, or if you have a Parkway in front of your house or business and want a free tree planted, please email Michelle Fenwick at fenwickm@miamic.edu. The more signed water agreements we have before summer, the better! – Michelle Fenwick

Francine Prose presents a historical novel built around a famous photograph by Brassai of two women at a table in a Paris nightclub, Le Monocle, in 1932. The one wearing the tuxedo is athlete, race-car driver, and Nazi collaborator Violette Morris. Prose considered writing a biography about her, but instead shaped a union of fact and fiction by creating a circle of witnesses and recorders of varying degrees of reliability. She utilizes characters loosely based on noted artists and writers of that time and brings them together at the “anything goes” Chameleon Club, where they cross paths with Lou Villars, the fictionalized version of Violette Morris.

The author effectively weaves together the stories of these multiple personalities to tell the larger picture of France and Europe between the World Wars. The novel captures the brilliance of Paris’ bohemian art scene in the 20s and 30s, as well as the dark days that followed.

We are excited to celebrate our 11th Run for the Green on March 16th. Throughout the next several weeks students will gather pledges for this popular event that highlights health and wellness. Keep an eye out for students running lemonade or snack stands around University Heights for donations for Birney, and please show them your support! Run for the Green makes it possible for Birney to offer every student its award-winning International Baccalaureate program with art, foreign language enrichment, a unique garden program, field trips, educational assemblies, and more. Go to FriendsofAliceBirney.org to make your donation and help keep this world-class program in University Heights. We would like to thank Las Patronas for providing a $12,858 grant to install shade structures over our garden classroom. These shades provide sun protection and allow a more enjoyable learning experience.

We will be celebrating International Mother Language Day at Family Friday on the 2nd of March, ending in a display of students’ home language flags and a world map showing the global diversity of our community. The following week, on March 9th, we offer bedtime stories and celebrate literacy by reading picture books to participants while they relax and enjoy snacks.

Our second book fair will be held March 19-23, the same week as Parent Teacher conferences. The second Trimester will end with a Morning Buzz. Please join us at the front of the school at 9:15 am on March 23rd for coffee, pastries, and conversation before we head off to Spring Break. – Ari Honarvar

Sponsor a Student (or Two) For Sixth Grade Camp

For more than 60 years, San Diego 6th grade students have enjoyed the great experiences offered by the Outdoor Education 6th Grade Camp program, but the days of district funding for 6th Grade Camp are over. The Roosevelt PTSA now helps sponsor Sixth Grade Camp, but we need your help. We always have a number of students who cannot afford the cost and are in need of scholarships. If you remember the fun and friendship you experienced at Sixth Grade Camp, or just want to help send as many kids as possible to camp this year, visit the website and click the “donate today” button: https://friendsroosevelt.org/contribute/. Thank you!

As the Hepatitis A outbreak winds down – and let’s be clear, that is not officially over just because the emergency has ended – I want to thank University Heights residents and all San Diegans for their response.

Since the County medical team began caring for the Hepatitis A outbreak last March, the county’s Health and Human Services team in partnership with others began writing the book on how to respond. It was more than public health notices, press releases, and 100-plus media interviews. It was also more than giving 117,000 vaccinations, distributing sanitation kits, and pushing out extensive education materials to one and all. Our entire region coalesced in a way I’ve never seen. At the county, we stayed with and followed the guidelines and guidance from the experts at the Centers for Disease Control.

Our hospitals and medical community were indispensable, treating not just those who showed up on their doorsteps. The ambulance and paramedic teams brought county public health services for homeless individuals, day and night, into remote areas where they could interact directly with those most vulnerable. The homeless provider community response was exemplary, with everyone doing their share – and more. San Diego’s tourism and restaurant industries were incredibly engaged. By re-emphasizing sanitation and encouraging vaccinations, I believe they may have prevented the virus from spreading into a new population.

County leadership kept the resources flowing, while our four top doctors worked non-stop schedules. The fantastic four poured through administrative work, met daily with government, business and media, and, most importantly, mapped for us with the U.S. Centers for Disease Control as their guide) a strategy to deal with an outbreak unlike any faced by a major U.S. metropolitan area in my lifetime.

Finally, I want to thank our crucial partners, the members of the public. As awareness spread, they didn’t panic and demand vaccinations en masse. Instead, they examined the situation factually and generally sought vaccinations only if they were going to be in close contact with the at-risk population. Acting otherwise would have crippled the vaccine supply.

We also grieve for the 20 individuals who died, and for their surviving friends and family members.

To the many more people who suffered through Hep. A., and beat it, I offer my sympathies for what was likely a great personal struggle.

We will probably never know how this variant of Hepatitis A made its way into our community, but we must be vigilant to keep it from returning. What we do know is that our entire community rose up to help bring this outbreak to an end as a public health threat.

Thank you all. Thank you very, very much.

FROM YOUR COUNCILMEMBER

LOOKING FORWARD TO A BUSY YEAR

My team and I are excited to be back in full swing for my second year in office serving District Three and University Heights. I have taken on new committee assignments this year, with more opportunities to strengthen our communities and move San Diego forward.

In 2018, I have been assigned by my colleagues to be Chair of the Economic Development and Intergovernmental Relations Committee. Over the next year, this committee will tackle a number of issues including state and federal legislation, provide oversight of local agencies like the Convention Center and Civic San Diego, and pursue economic programs and job development initiatives.

Addressing homelessness continues to be my number one priority and I will continue to lead the Select Committee on Homelessness and serve as Vice Chair of The Regional Task Force on the Homeless. Our three large-scale temporary shelters are all up and running, getting more than 700 homeless San Diegans off the streets and connected.

We are also moving forward with increased storage facilities and an intake facility to better coordinate services for homeless individuals throughout the region. We recently completed San Diego’s 2018 Point-in-Time Count, and once the data is processed, we’ll be better equipped to target our response to the crisis and get more from our limited resources.

Here in University Heights, a Request for Proposals was recently issued for the San Diego Unified School District Education Center, which includes the Teachers Training Annex #1 Building (located at the intersection of Park Blvd., Normal St. and El Cajon Blvd). Although this is not a city-owned property and the city is not involved in the RFP process, potential plans to redevelop the site could have significant impacts in the community. I believe it is important to reflect the historical significance of the Teachers Training Annex #1 Building in the master plans, and I would like to see a public use for this space. Our office is monitoring the process and will continue to communicate community feedback. You can also contact Khi Jackson directly at the school office at kjackson5@sandi.net.

Thank you for your continued work for University Heights, and for the opportunity to serve our neighborhood. Please stay up to date on upcoming events in the neighborhood throughout the coming year, and have a safe and happy year. If you need any assistance with city services or have ideas you’d like to share, please contact my liaison to the community, Tyler Renner, at (619) 236-6633 or trenner@sandiego.gov or my office at christopherward@sandiego.gov.

I was unpleasantly surprised to hear during the February UHCA meeting that the Utilities Undergrounding Program is no longer being considered for University Heights.

The city is currently relocating approximately 15 miles of overhead utility lines underground throughout the city each year. The city spends approximately $54 million a year to convert unsightly overhead power and communication lines to safer and more reliable underground systems. Although the city has been undergrounding lines since 1970, approximately 1,000 miles of overhead utility lines remain to be undergrounded. Nearly all residential areas should be completed within the next 54 years.

Based on representations from the city over the past 20 years, we thought that University Heights projects would be on the short list for completion in the next decade. We also understood that funding has been collected by an SDG&E 3.5 percent surcharge since at least 2003. Although there is a disclaimer on the city’s website that the City Council may change the order of undergrounding projects set forth in the schedule (https://www.sandiego.gov/undergrounding), we believe that the concerns of our neighborhood should still be heard. Although no University Heights undergrounding projects appear on the list for the next five years, Mission Hills, North Park, and South Park neighborhoods have areas designated for undergrounding. Some UH residents may not support undergrounding because of construction hassles and utility boxes in the sidewalk right of way. However, for those who want to be rid of the unsightly century-old overhead wires that blight our streets (ignoring for now benefits of undergrounding, including increased fire safety, maintenance, increased urban forestry opportunities, and power reliability), now is the time to do something. Unfortunately, the official comment deadline (Feb. 9) will have passed by the time you read this article.

Nevertheless, we can still contact Councilmember Chris Ward’s office and request that University Heights be added to the new five-year undergrounding master plan and that the community be involved in the planning process. Tyler Renner is the Council Rep for University Heights: trenner@sandiego.gov. – Bill Wild
